6 Are Killed And 15 Hurt In Ohio Bus Smash-up

Chicago-Bound Carrier Collides Head-on With Truck.

Seventh Victim Believed Dying

Elyria, Ohio, April 15 (AP).—Six persons were injured fatally, a seventh critically hurt, and 14 others less seriously injured when a Chicago-bound passenger bus and an eastbound truck crashed head-on early today near here.

The dead were John Serbon, 35, Holiday Cove, W. Va.; Earl Kellogg, 35, Lansing, Mich.; Sam Novak, Duquesne, Pa.; Floyd Stalnaker, Akron, Ohio; Christo Vasilovich, 40, Massillon, Ohio, and Michael Frydrych, 29, New York City.

At Elyria Memorial Hospital it was reported that Mrs. Marie Kaser, Huntington, Park, Ind., was in a critical condition. She suffered a fractured skull and other injuries. An extra staff of nurses was summoned to care for the victims.

The bus was en route from Pittsburgh to Chicago. Sheriff Clarence Dick, of Lorain County, said preliminary examination indicated the driver of the bus, William Daniels, 32, of Pittsburgh, had turned out to pass a truck parked on the right side of the road when the crash occurred.

Both Daniels and E. O. Kirkpatrick, of Columbus, driver of the truck which figured in the collision, escaped with only minor injuries.

Fire Destroys Bus Near City

Cherry Festival Tourists Escape and Baggage Is Saved.

A packed Nevin passenger bus en route from New York to the Cherry Blossom Festival here caught fire early yesterday between Laurel and Savage, Md.

All passengers escaped and baggage was saved. The fire originated in the exhaust and destroyed the bus.

Two Greyhound buses, operating between Washington and Baltimore passed the scene a few seconds after the fire was discovered and their pilots assisted Driver R. B. Cecil in removing the baggage.

The Laurel Fire Department was summoned and arrived within six minutes, but some time was consumed in connecting pumping apparatus with the nearby river and the flames were soon beyond control.

A woman passenger is reported to have smelled smoke and given the alarm.

Another bus was rushed to the scene after the fire and brought passengers and baggage to Washington.

Louisiana Girl, 16, Tortured and Slain

Man, 50, Who Hired Her as Maid Is Sought.

Shreveport, La., April 15 (AP).—A slayer who tortured his 16-year-victim before her death was the object of a hunt today after discovery of the body of Mae Griffin in a thickly wooded area on the outskirts of the city.

Officers had a detailed description of the 50-year-old man with whom the kirl left home last Thursday morning. He had hired her as a maid, but the address he gave as his home proved fictitious when the girl's mother, Mrs. L. R. Peters became alarmed a few minutes after she allowed the girl to leave with him.

The girl's throat had been slashed four times, a deep gash inflicted in her body and there were minor cuts, Dr. W. P Butler, Caddo Parish coroner, said.

Chamberlin Cracks Plane in Take-Off

New York, April 15 (AP).—An airplane piloted by Clarence Chamberlin nosed over at the Holmes Airport in Queens today but Chamberlin and his two passengers were not hurt.

The flier was taxiing for a take-off on a short flight when a tire blew out.

Trotsky Found Hiding In Fear of Assassins

Villa Raided by French Police Hunting for Stavisky Gang.

Barbizon, France, April 15 (AP).—A police raid on a mysterious and secluded villa here today revealed that Leon Trotzky, exiled former Soviet minister of war, had been living there for three months in secrecy, fearing attacks on his life by vengeful czarist Russians.

Police and detectives had surrounded the villa for 36 hours, thinking they had discovered a secret arms cache or a rendezvous of Stavisky gangsters. Threats against Trotzky's life have kept him in flight from enemies for the past year, secret police revealed.

The "man without a country," who wandered over Europe and Turkey since his fall from power in 1927, came to France from Corsica last July. Renewed threats against him brought authorization of the French government for him to hide, with Mrs. Trotzky, at Barbizon.

"I am an old conspirator," Trotzky told police, "I am now preparing for the fourth internationale."

A plumber, who recently repaired pipes, said he was mysteriously conducted to and from the villa and was locked in a room while at work. Gossip reached the ears of the mayor of Barbizon and made

Cannon 'Gives Up' as Police Hunt Driver

Representative's Auto in Crash; Prominent New Yorker Hurt.

A game of hide and seek with police and Representative Raymond J. Cannon, Wisconsin, as principal figures, ended abruptly last night when the lawmaker appeared at the First Precinct station to explain his connection with an early morning auto crash, in which two members of the New York Stock Exchange were injured.

Shortly after 2 a. m. yesterday police broadcast a lookout for a large sedan bearing Congressional tags. The car's driver, a report stated, left the scene of an accident at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, without making known his identity.

A later report, however, said the car was listed to Representative Cannon and had been found at a filling station near Fourth street and Constitution avenue northwest. The driver was still "unknown," it was added.

Cannon's Story Differs.

Meanwhile, Herbert Wellington and Edward Henry Harriman Simmons, both members of the New York Stock Exchange, were taken to Emergency Hospital. They were recovering from injuries today. Simmons remained in the hospital with a fractured shoulder. Wellington was released after treatment for severel lacerations.

They were passengers in a taxi driven by Raymond C. Myers, 29, of the 3900 block of Davenport street northwest. Police claimed the car which struck Myers' cab stopped for several minutes, then drove away before the driver was identified. But Representative Cannon had a different story.

"I was driving the car," he said, "and remained at the scene of the accident for more than 20 minutes. My machine struck the taxi when it turned suddenly without a warning signal. The policeman that sent a lookout for my car and handled the report does not deserve to be on the force."

Cannon declared he later took his machine to the filling station for repairs. He said Policemen A. S.

Dover Mayor Plans To Oppose Townsend

Wilmington, Del., April 15 (AP).—J. Wallace Woodford, Mayor of Dover, today confirmed the report that he will be a candidate for United States Senator on the Democratic ticket to succeed United States Senator John G. Townsend, jr., Republican, of Selbyville.

With this confirmation also came the announcement of State Senator J. Harry Latchum, of Milford, that he will seek the Democratic Congressional nomination.

Bishop Urges D. A. R. Shield Happy Homes

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman Sounds Plea on Eve of Congress.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

The service was attended by Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general, the majority of members of her board of management and hundreds of delegates and alternates to the forty-sixth Continental Congress of the D. A. R., which opens in Constitution Hall this morning.

A feaure of the service was the presentation of the flag of the State of Washington by the D. A. R. of that State to Washington Cathedral. It will hang from the triforium gallery of the great choir and sanctuary with other State flags.

The presentation was by Miss Zoe M. Beal, State regent of Washington State, who gave the flag in behalf of her State organization, in memory of Robert Gray, a sea captain, who did much to claim a large part of the Pacific Northwest for the United States.

Bishop Receives Flag.

Bishop Freeman received the flag for the Cathedral Chapter and said a special dedicatory prayer.

"Keep the home fires burning," urged Bishop Freeman in his address. "Keep the streams of social life unpolluted, lest our youth catch some infection and destroy the moral sense of the Nation. Guard the institutions of religion and preserve the American home."

The bishop denounced divorce and said it is accountable for the disruption of the American home.

Curry's Tammany Aids Face Revolts

New York, April 15 (AP).—Several Tammany district leaders favorable to John F. Curry, the Hall's chieftain, were reported tonight to be facing uprisings which may bring to a climax the movement to oust Curry.

Dr. Solomon Goldenkranz, a Curry supporter, was requested to resign his district leadership yesterday by a majority of the district captains. Goldenkranz, however, declared the group had no power to oust him.

Leaders of the revolt against Curry's leadership were reported planning to call on the chieftain early in the week to give him a last chance to resign.

Clamor May Save Hero Dog From Joining Dead Mistress

Topeka, Kans., April 15 (AP).—A dog with a hero's record, a trunkload of blue ribbons and an Irish name, has Topeka debating over whether he shall live or die.

His mistress, Mrs. Rolla J. Parker, left behind a request that he follow her in death. She feared the Airedale would fall into unsympathetic hands. A veterinarian, Dr. Charles W. Bower, is ready to chloroform him.

But hundreds of dog lovers have demanded that he be permitted to live. They point out that Pal O'Cragsman is only 6 years old, too young to die. They also insist he is too fine a dog to die.

Once when his mistress fainted in her hotel room, he restored her to consciousness by licking her face. He was cited for heroism. He carried away more than 100 blue ribbons in dog shows.

John Sweet, manager of the hotel where Mrs. Parker lived, feels certain the dog could be given a good home.

"Mrs. Parker, as we all know, has been extremely kind to her pet," says Miss Kate King, a member of the Humane Society, "and may have feared he would fall into the hands of a less kind owner."

"I shall follow instructions," says Dr. Bower.

But the warmth of the debate has caused him to hesitate. He plans to await a decision of the executors, which probably will be reached at a meeting tomorrow. The administrators include a Topeka bank and John Purcell, of Chicago, assistant to the vice president of the Santa Fe Railway. Mrs. Parker was the widow of a former Santa Fe general manager.

Farley Ends P.O. Lay-Off Without Pay

Increased Business in Six Weeks Reason for Order.

Additional Services to Require More Men in Department.

"Improved business conditions throughout the country" resulted yesterday in Postmaster General James A. Farley revoking his order of March 2 providing for payless furloughs for postal employes and curtailment of service for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Farley announced that an increase in the volume of mail indicated greatly improved conditions during the past six weeks, justifying increased deliveries, longer hours of window service and the employment of additional postal workers.

Presidential postmasters, officials and employes in the field service of the Postoffice Department, who were ordered to take four days furlough without pay before July 1, will benefit by Farley's order, as will several thousand substitutes who will again be employed.

No Vacations Granted.

Only that part of the March 2 order covering the deferring of vacations until the next fiscal year is not revoked.

Farley's announcement yesterday read:

"Improved business conditions throughout the country have resulted in such a substantial increase in postal revenues during the months of February and March and offer such prospects of continued increases that I feel justified in revoking, effective May 1, my order of March 2, providing for payless furloughs of postal employes and curtailment in service during the remainder of the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1934.

"The only provision of the order not to be revoked is that which requires that vacations which have not been taken by employes be deferred until the beginning of the new fiscal year, July 1, 1934.

"Not only will further payless furloughs during the remainder of the fiscal year be eliminated, but beginning May 1 there will be a

179,000 Share Pension Funds

(Associated Press.

Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Bureau administrator, last night made public plans to pay out $37,427,000 to 179,000 veterans of the Spanish War, the Boxer Rebellion and the Philippine Insurrection under provisions o. the independent offices appropriation act.

He said 57,000 veterans of these conflicts would be restored to the pension rolls and that 122,000 would receive compensation increases so that they will get 75 per cent of what they were receiving when the economy act was passed in March, 1933.

Hines said that by April 30 the 57,000 who were cut off the rolls last year will have been restored to the lists. He added that because of the detailed work involved, the 122,000 who will receive increases might not get them before May 30.

Three Aces Give 'Warning' of Evil; Two Die in Crash

Three aces, three days—and two lives. A premonition fulfilled. Last Thursday, Lawrence L. Howell, 38, was playing cards with friends. Three times in a row he drew the ace of spades. He remarked it was an ill-omen and predicted "something is going to happen."

Early yesterday Howell was driving his automobile along upper Sixteenth street northwest. At Upshur street his car crashed into a sedan driven by Robert P. Smith, 37, 5000 block of Sixteenth street northwest. Howell was killed. A companion, Miss Mildred Holland, 22, of the 1000 block of Twelfth street northwest, died en route to the hospital.

Miss Mae Gunther, 28, Miss Holland's roommate, and William M. Stitley, 25, a soldier stationed at Walter Reed Hospital, were injured, not seriously.

Michigan Tip Fails To Capture Dillinger

Detroit, April 15 (AP).—John Dillinger, Indiana's No. 1 bad man, was reported roaming around southwest Michigan today, but Michigan's law-enforcing agencies failed to find any trace of him.

State police said a general watch of all highways in southwest Michigan had been ordered.

Conference On Money Set April 23

Action Follows Roosevelt Statement Problem Must Be Met.

A call to all members of Congress to attend a monetary conference April 23, was issued last night by one of the leaders of the silver bloc in Congress, Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma.

The summons went out a day after President Roosevelt listed the monetary problem as one issue to be taken up before adjournment.

Thomas said the purpose of his summons was "not to fight the President, but to get something constructive" in the way of legislation.

"We must," he said, "immediately formulate some means whereby the people of this country can become financially solvent. That's the purpose of this meeting—to consider all possible ways and means of taking action toward settling the monetary problems of the Nation."

Asked how prominently silver remonization would figure in the Congressional conference, Thomas said it was planned to discuss that first.

Progress Reported.

In his round-table talk Saturday with chairmen of all the Senate committees, the President discussed monetary subjects in general. A formal White House statement merely listed the monetary question as one of several on which "definite progress was made."

Significance was given the monetary phase of the conference by the fact that Secretary Morgenthau sat through the entire proceedings.

Morgenthau, with the knowledge that pressure for silver remonetization legislation was growing steadily, has urged that action by Congress be held off until the Administration had an opportunity for further analysis of the problem.

Two silver bills are pending. The Dies measure, providing for acceptance of silver from foreign countries which buy farm surpluses, has passed the House and gone to the Senate. The Fiesinger bill, to provide for the purchase of 1,500,000,000 ounces, or as much as "necessary to restore the 1926 price level," with currency issued against the silver, has been reported out of a House committee.

Cites Oklahoma's Plight.

Thomas called attention to the calling out of National Guardsmen in 11 Oklahoma counties to halt the sale of homes and farms for taxes.

"The action taken by the Governor in calling out the State militia to stop tax sales," he said, "is a typical example of why we must make haste to determine upon a sound financial program. Those people in Oklahoma have no money, they can't sell anything, they can't borrow any money. What are they going to do? No one is specifically responsible and no one, except the President and Congress, can help them. We've got to get some remedy. We're getting together to try to force some kind of a compromise program through to get relief, but not too drastic a program."

Gen. Hayashi Keeps Japanese War Post

Tokyo, April 15 (AP).—After keeping the nation in suspense for four days by insisting that he must resign because of a stain on the family honor, Gen. Senjuro Hayashi today yielded to importunities and agreed to remain as minister of war.

For three days Gen. Hayashi rejected pleas of Premier Makoto Saito, other cabinet members and fellow generals. The general's brother, former Mayor of Tokyo and former deputy, was convicted of corruption and sentenced to 10 months in jail.

35 Freight Cars Blaze When Train Is Wrecked

Kane, Pa., April 15 (AP).—A freight train of 35 cars, wrecked on the Pennsylvania Railroad near Tiona, burned for 13 hours today before fire departments from Kane, Sheffield and Warren extinguished the fire.

None was injured. The loss was estimated at $100,000. Fourteen of the cars were loaded with oil and grease.

Goslin Swings, Misses; Nose in Way, He Hits It

Cincinnati, April 15 (AP).—Goose Goslin, Detroit Tigers' outfielder, took such a cut at a ball in the game with Cincinnati today that he swung completely around and the bat struck him in the nose. His nose bled so profusely that he had to leave the game. It happened in the seventh inning.

Voliva Is Defeated In Zion City Voting

Zion City, Ill., April 15 (U.P.).—Wilbur Glen Voliva, Zion City religious and politcial leader, lost his first election here in 23 years yesterday.

Three of Voliva's candidates for school board positions were defeated by opposition candidates who had resented Voliva's leadership and his teaching that the world is flat.

Roosevelt Tells Leaders Market Control, Tariff Bills Must Be Enacted

Plane Drops Boat, Saves Flier in Sea

The story of how a man on a Navy torpedo plane risked his life to drop an inflated rubber boat to a fallen flier, faced with drowning as his ship capsized at sea during war games with the U. S. fleet off the west coast of Mexico, was flashed to the Navy Department yesterday by the fleet's commander in chief, Admiral David Foote Sellers.

The rescued was Ensign Allan L. Dunning, pilot of a Navy fighting plane which foundered and sank in a forced landing at sea just as two divisions of the fleet were concluding a sham battle.

His rescuers were named in Admiral Sellers' terse message as Gay and Benche, the crew of a torpedo plane piloted by Lieut. Howard E. Ballman. VT Squadron 2B, attached to the carrier Saratoga.

As Dunning swam, awaiting assistance, Ballman circled his plane.

"With the assistance of his crew, Gay and Benche," Admiral Sellers' message read, "he succeeded in inflating and dropping a rubber boat near Dunning. To do this it was necessary for Gay to climb out of the front cockpit, go alongside of the fuselage to the tool compartment abaft the main cockpit, inflate the rubber boat and drop it over the side. This remarkable action

100,000 See Cherry Buds; Traffic Tied

A fringe of trees along the Tidal Basin yesterday put on a show that is one of the Nation's annual wonders before a first-day audience of more than 100,000, mostly from out of town.

The show—the yearly blooming of Washington's famed Japanese cherry trees—began almost at dawn as a few hundred led a march that was to become a veritable mass of humanity crawling along the white-bordered basin.

The Capital's Park Police, whose business it is to keep toll of the cherry-tree pilgrims, had yet to complete their tabulation last night, but the number of the beauty seekers was estimated as well above the anticipated quarter of a million. A seemingly endless line of cars moved around the basin, laying gaseous smoke in a blue haze. Traffic was jammed in all directions.

Rain Likely Today.

The weather held fair and warm all day, but last night meteorological conditions threatened rain and falling temperatures for today, continuing probably through tomorrow, according to Weather Bureau forecasters. But, regardless of the weather, 250,000 will have crowded to the basin to view the famous blooms, the Greater National Capital committee estimates.

Meanwhile, a group of the Capital's citizens went ahead with plans for the first Cherry Blossom Festival starting Thursday, although rain and low temperatures probably will delay the height of the blooming. First problem for Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired, chairman of the festival committee, will be to find funds sufficient to array befittingly a queen and her entourage.

The queen of the first Cherry Blossom Festival, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt, lacks a float—any kind of a float—to carry her and her ladies-in-waiting in the procession

Bluege Hurt As Nats Rout Orioles, 12-7

Struck on Knee by Pitch, But Will Play Today; Hits Homer, 2 On.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

Baltimore, April 15.—The curse of the exhibition games all but visited the Nats again today in the course of a 12-7 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles when Third-Baseman Ossie Bluege was felled by a pitch that struck him on the right knee, and for several moments made his appearance in the Nats' opening game tomorrow doubtful.

Batting against Cliff Melton, towering Oriole southpaw, in the seventh inning, Bluege was unable to get out of the way of a fast curve and the ball struck him full on the knee with a resounding crack.

Manager Joe Cronin, Trainer Mike Martin and a group of equally panicky teammates gathered about Bluege after he attempted to go to first-base, and then sank to the turf in the infield in pain.

Pronounced Not Serious.

Vigorous rubbing of the knee, which several years ago was submitted to an operation, relieved the pain and Bluege was taken in charge by Trainer Mike Martin. Following ice-pack treatments, "Sir Mique" reported that the knee was only slightly bruised and that Bluege would be on the job in tomorrow's season opener at Washington.

The Nats made free with the Baltimore pitching with 18 hits to win the game, but their exhibition series ended on a sour note when the Orioles banged Weaver for six consecutive hits in the third inning to score seven runs, the climactic blow being Woodley Abernathy's homer over the center-field fence with the bases full.

Maxine Elliot's Monkey Bites Her Leg, Pays With His Teeth

Juan-Les-Pins, France, April 15 (AP).—Kiki, Maxine Elliot's pet monkey, bit her severely on the leg today while she was playing backgammon, and lost all his teeth as a consequence.

The former American actress and New York theater owner was having a quiet game in the garden of her villa Horizon with Lady Castlerosse, Patricia Russell and Capt. Brock Bridgeman.

Kiki, who has a reputation on the Riviera as a bad actor, without warning seized Maxine's ankle in his paws and sank his teeth into the calf of her leg.

Maxine screamed. The women hurried indoors and Bridgeman grabbed Kiki by the tail.

A doctor hurried to the villa and cauterized the wound, which he said was not serious.

Maxine was furious. She ordered Kiki taken to Cannes to have all his teeth removed, hoping to put an end to Kiki's depredations.

The animal's reputation on the Riviera has not been helped any by chasing guests in hotels and chewing up expensive tapestries.

Fairbanks Leaves Party; Lady Ashley Also Guest

Dublin, Irish Free State, April 15 (AP).—Traveling alone, Douglas Fairbanks left tonight for Holyhead, the nearest English port, on the night mail boat.

The American film actor has been a guest at Luttrellstown Castle of the Hon. Brinsley Plunkett at a house party. Lady Ashley, whose husband has named Douglas Fairbanks as corespondent in a pending divorce action, also was a guest.

Bank Guarantee Proposal Listed

Tax Set-up Also Slated, but Not With Excise Levies on Oil.

Congressional leaders were told plainly last night exactly what legislation President Roosevelt wants to become law before adjournment.

Taking hold of the reins of the legislative branch—which has been kicking over the traces—the Chief Executive emphasized in another series of White House conferences that the stock market regulation bill, reciprocal tariff bill, the municipal bankruptcy and guarantee bank deposit proposals should be placed on the statute books.

The controverted tax bill also is on the Presidential legislative list, but he does not want it with the excise tax on coconut and sesame oils. Mr. Roosevelt considers such a levy unfair to the Philippine Islands.

Those summoned to the White House last night were House leaders, headed by Speaker Henry T. Rainey. They met in the White House study at 8:30 p. m. The Senate Democratic chieftains met with Mr. Roosevelt for more than four hours yesterday. While the discussions were under way the general opinion was that some additional monetary legislation would be proposed by the Administration and probably would relate to silver.

Spurns Inflation Bill.

It also was indicated the Administration was opposed to action on the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing-inflation bill and the McLeod proposal to have the Federal Government pay off depositors in closed banks.

The President is ready to veto the general revenue bill, because of the proposed tax of 3 cents a pound on Philippine oils, and Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee, planned to ask the Senate tomorrow to reconsider the bill, passed Friday. It has not yet reached the House, where opposition was voiced Saturday to many of the Senate provisions increasing the total from $258,000,000 to $480,000,000

The conferees included Representative Byrns of Tennessee, party floor leader; Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, of the Interstate Commerce Committee, handling the stock market regulation bill; Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the Ways and Means Committee, which initiated the general revenue bill; Chairman Steagall (Democrat), Ala-

Eggs and Bomb Greet Dolfuss

Chancellor Meets Scornful Reception at Graz Mass Meeting.

Graz, Austria, April 15 (AP).—Rotten eggs were thrown at Chancellor Dolfuss and a harmless bomb exploded within 300 feet of him when he appeared here today to address a mass meeting.

Spoiled eggs splashed the clothes and uniforms of Dolfuss paraders, but missed the little chancellor himself.

Socialists had painted the highway red from the airport where Dolfuss landed to the city limits of Graz. Pavements were splashed with such slogans as "down with Fascism!" and "down with Dolfuss!"

The mass meeting proper was quiet, but attempts to broadcast the chancellor's speech were mysteriously sabotaged.

Dolfuss said the accusation that his government was developing into a clerical autocracy was unfounded.

Special interest was aroused when the chancellor said he had reached a "full agreement" with Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, leader of the Fascist Heimwehr, or home guard. Some hearers interpreted this to mean that Starhemberg will become vice chancellor.

15,000 Radicals Hold Spain Protest Meeting

Madrid, April 15 (AP).—A general strike in scattered sections of Spain entered its thirteenth day today, but only minor incidents were reported.

Fifteen thousand extremists met in a bull ring here and demanded a "united proletarian front." Police and soldiers were on guard as a precaution against trouble.

Committee Calls Proposal More Dangerous Than Dry Law.

New York, April 15 (AP).—Formation of a State-wide committee which subscribes to the belief that the proposed child labor amendment is "much more objectionable and dangerous than the eighteenth amendment" was announced today.

The committee, organized to oppose ratification of the amendment, is headed by Elihu Root as honorary chairman and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler as executive chairman.

William D. Guthrie, vice chairman, has prepared a 45-page brochure outlining the committee's opposition and predicting any attempt to exercise Federal control over the Nation's children would result "in as great and disgraceful failure as the attempt to enforce the Volstead act."

The brochure, which is in the form of a rely to a group of lawyers who urged ratification, will be submitted to the Legislature tomorrow.

Smith Raps Amendment.

In a digent of Vice Chairman Guthrie's reply, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, a member of the committee, is quoted as saying:

"We are told that Congress will never do anything extreme or undesirable under this amendment. That is just what the Wheelers and Cannons told us about the eighteenth amendment."

Discussing the lawyers' stand, Guthrie's reply declares that where the eighteenth amendment was limited to a prohibition of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes and granted to Congress only a "concurrent" power of enforcement, the proposed child labor amendment would give Congress "an unlimited governmental power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under 18."

Sees "Real Motive."

The "real motive and true impetus" behind the agitation for the amendment, says the Digest, "is not the welfare of children but to regulate competition and introduce uniform conditions in industry throughout the United States."

Other members of the committee include former Chief Judge Frank H. Hiscock and Judge William S. Andrews of the Court of Appeals; former Gov. Nathan L. Miller, James W. Wadsworth, James Byrne, chancellor of New York University; former Judge Daniel J. Kenefick, president of the New York State Bar Association, and eight former presidents; Thomas D. Thacher, George W. Wickersham, Henry W. Taft, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Miss Anne Morgan, Mrs. John S. Sheppard, Mrs. Courtlandt Nicoll, Miss Ruth M. Minor, Jerome D. Arnum, Syracuse publisher; Rol-Bond, of Syracuse.

Hitler Yo Yuth Aid May Resign Post

Baron von Schirach Is Arroused by Arrest.

Dresden, Germany, April 15 (AP).—Baldur Von Schirach, Reich leader of youth, has threatened to resign his post, it was learned today, in protest against the arrest of his subordinate, Franz Cchnaedter, a Hitler youth leader of central Germany.

Schnaedter's arrest by local police was the culmination of long friction between the Nazi Governor of Saxony, Martin Mutschmann, and divisional Hitler youth headquarters here.

In view of Von Schirach's personal prestige and the popularity enjoyed by Schnaedter among his charges the latter's release was expected.

Talmadge Divorce And Journey East Revive Jessel Talk

El Paso, Tex., April 15 (AP).—Norma Talmadge headed today for New York and a meeting with George Jessel was taken for granted by her friends.

In New York, Jessel, comedian, with whom Miss Talmadge's name has been linked frequently by the romantically inclined, received the divorce news with the comment: "That's fine!" and the added assurance: "I think she's very nice."

Joseph Schenck, the screen star's former husband, once explained their estrangement arose from business interests and his neglect to send Miss Talmadge flowers.

Probe of Mysterious Drowning Is Opened

Norwalk, Conn., April 15 (AP).—New York State police were called upon today by the Connecticut authorities to help them solve the mystery surrounding the death of arthur Todd, 70, reputedly wealthy and retired business man of Belle Island. Todd's body was found yesterday in Long Island Sound.

Police are proceeding on the theory that Todd was slain and robbed after a drinking party in his home. He was known to have had $8,000 in his possession at the time of his death.

Federal Church Body Urges Peace Crusade

New York, April 15 (AP).—Officers of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, in a pastoral letter, today appealed to Christian bodies of all nations to join in a crusade against war and preparations for war.

Joining with the council in the letter was the American section of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the American section of the Universal Christian Council.

Prophets and Pay-Offs

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, April 15 (Spl.).—You can imagine my chagrin when, upon returning to my office from a short trip, I pick up the paper, find the sports pages full of predictions, selections and prophecies by my young men on the forthcoming pennant races which open in earnest on Tuesday, and realize that I have not been invited to contribute my opinions on the probable winners in the National and American Leagues. I resent this, because over a long stretch of years I have shown myself to be as bad a prophet as any of the young men who work with me.

I have been more consistently wrong over a longer stretch than they can hope to be. Mine has been no flash-in-the-pan wrongness, an occasional error thrown in here and there to make me look human. It is consistency over the long route that counts. My clients have come to depend on me. And then I'm not invited to be wrong; am put up on the shelf while the boys parade their own ignorance! Jimmy Powers picks the Giants, Marshall Hunt the Yanks, George Kenney awards the Dodgers fifth place How do you like that? Prophets, eh?

The Giants won't win the National League pennant this year. They won t even finish in second place. Chicago Cubs first, St. Louis Cardinals second and the Giants third. You're welcome. Can we interest you in a subscription? Have this sort of stuff follow you when you go away on your vacation. It would be a shame to miss it.

Brooklyn? I pick them to finish third in the International League. Much as it pains me to have to do so, I must string along with my hired hand, Mr. Hunt, in the American League. I do not see how any one is going to take that flag from the Yankees. World series in New York again with Ruppert's beer flowing in rivers—Yummy. Gallico is a pig who thinks only of his stomach. I like Detroit for second place, Washington third, Philadelphia fourth and Glens Falls, N. Y., fifth. I guess I know as little about baseball as anybody.

But far more interesting than the pull-a-name-out-of-a-hat sports department guess of a so-called expert [who calls me an expert?] is the opinion of a gentleman who lives in St. Louis named Thomas Kearney.

Mr. Kearney is a betting commissioner who runs the largest winter book on the Kentucky Derby in the country. He will also quote you a price and take your money on the pennant races. He backs his judgment with his bank account. He recently sent me two little slips quoting his odds on the ball clubs and I will pass them along to you with stimulating and appropriate comment.

In the National League, you can get 2 to 1 on the Giants to finish in first place, 3 to 5 for second and 1 to 4 for third. Chicago and Pittsburgh are both 2½ to 1 to win, 4 to 5 and 1 to 3 for the other place. But Old Mr. Tom must know something about those hometown Cardinals, because an investment of $1 will bring you back $4 if the Red Birds finish first next fall. My goodness, 4 to 1 against the Cards! That sounds like very pretty money to me. That sounds almost like a better investment than most of the stocks on the board right now. H-m. Four to 1. Nope. Too long to wait for my money. I hear tell that Riskulus can win that Derby in Old Kaintuck—hear it from a guy who saw the animal gallop at Agua Caliente.

Boston is 12 to 1, Brooklyn is 30 to 1 to win, which doesn't seem like enough, and Philadelphia and Cincinnati are both 100 to 1. Mr. Kearney evidently hasn't much faith in Mr. Crosley as a baseball magnate. You can get 2½ to 1 that either won't finish in fourth place.

In the American League, the prices are as follows: Washington is 5 to 4 to win, 2 to 5 to place and 1 to 10 to show. That is a very, very short price and not the best investment in the world. The Yankees are 2 to 1, 3 to 5 and 1 to 6. That looks like a nice little bet.

Now, evidently Mr. Kearney thinks enough of Mr. Yawkey's Boston team to offer no more than 6 to 1 odds and put them in third place in the betting, with Chicago at 8 to 1 and the Detroit Tigers bringing 12 for 1, 4 to 1 for second and 3 to 2 to show. Cleveland is a 15-to-1 shot, and, so low have the mighty fallen, the Philadelphia Athletics are in seventh place in the betting and are quoted at 50 to 1 to win the pennant, and will actually bring you 3 to 2 for fourth place. That, so help me, seems to be the ticket that Mr. Kearney will write. The Browns are no better than 60 to 1 to win. No 100-to-1 shots in the American League, which is just another slap in the face for the National League. I hope you've been entertained.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie's Eyes Full at Aunt Lindy's

For two or three days after the goose shooting, it rained hard, and the wind blew terrible, and so Blackie couldn't begin to build his smokehouse, and he couldn't go out to get any cane roots or any other green things to eat. A bear dearly loves to eat tender young roots, buds and green things, and he had gotten pretty tired of eating nothing but fat meat. He even had enough of turkey. So he said he would have to sneak around and see if there wasn't something green in Aunt Lindy's garden.

Blackie hadn't been near Aunt Lindy's place since that first day after he came down from the mountains, for he had never forgotten about the way little Sallie Cat had scratched up his nose. But he remembered mighty well about the big jar of honey he had seen on the kitchen table, and he thought a little of that honey would taste mighty good after eating so much fat meat.

Blackie never had told anybody about Aunt Lindy's house, for he had always intended to go back there some time and see about those kitties and that honey. He hadn't even thought about what a little while it takes for little kitens to grow up to be big cats, and that there were seven grown cats over there.

More About That.

But we will hear more about them after a while. Anyway, Blackie left home pretty soon after breakfast, the first day it wasn't raining, before any of his friends came over.

Now, while Rover Dog was lying around the kitchen at Mr. Man's house, he heard Mr. and Mrs. Man talk a good deal about all sorts of things in the neighborhood.

"e heard them say that Aunt Lindy's hens were laying lots of eggs, and that every few days she went to town to sell them. It had quit raining, and the sun had come out, and Rover Dog wanted to get out and run around anyway; and another thing that made him want to get out was the thought that, since this was the first pretty day there had been for some time, Aunt Lindy would be pretty sure to go to town with her butter and eggs and other things she had to sell.

And even if she carried all the eggs she had, the hens would be laying some more right along, and he could certainly find as many as he wanted to eat.

Rover Loves Eggs.

Rover Dog had always loved eggs, but he didn't dare to eat any of them at home. If Mr. Man caught him eating eggs, he would beat him most to death, if he didn't kill him. So about the time Blackie was starting to Aunt Lindy's house, Rover Dog was coming from the other side.

Sure enough, Aunt Lindy had gone to town, and she had left a big bucket of honey on her kitchen table. When Blackie got up pretty close to the fence he thought he had better be careful about going into the yard and so he climbed a big tree so he could see all over the place. What did he see? Well, what do you reckon?

bama), of the Banking Committee, in charge of the Federal bank deposit insurance legislation, and Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, of the appropriations group, which is to manage a deficiency bill calling for about $1,500,000,000 for additional public works outlays.

Money Session Called.

Meanwhile, Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, said he was authorized to announce a general meeting of Senators and Representatives on April 23 to discuss the Nation's monetary problems. Thomas is a leader in the silver bloc and inflationist group, and the new move is supported by a number of farm organizations.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the Agricultural Committee, plans to submit for House approval tomorrow the Senate-adopted conference report on the Bankhead compulsory cotton control bill. Indications are that the bill, which would limit production in the coming crop year to 10,000,000 bales, will be adopted and sent to the President.

Tomorrow, Chairman Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, of the Banking Committee, expects to call up for House action the agreement reached by conferees on the bill to guarantee the principal and interest of $2,000,000,000 in hom eloan bonds. The Senate and House conferees dropped the Administration approved Norris amendment to bar politics in making appointments to the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Minor legislation will be considered today by the House, but it plans to take up tomorrow the last of the annual supply bills—that providing $32,000,000 for the District of Columbia.

The Senate will be in recess today to permit the members to attend the opening of the big league baseball season.

D. A. R. Delegate Dies Suddenly

Mother of Justice Stone's Wife Is Victim.

Mrs. Ella G. Harvey, 84, of Amherst, Mass., mother-in-law of Justice H. F. Stone, of the United States Supreme Court, died early yesterday at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, 2340 Wyoming avenue.

She had come here to attend the D. A. R. congress and was taken suddenly ill.

She is survived also by three sons, Edward and Melvin Harvey, of Amherst, and John C. Harvey, of Boston. Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at Amherst. Burial will follow in Chesterfield, N. H., her birthplace.

Two Dead in Gas Blast In Home, 2 Are Dying

Johnsonburg, Pa., April 15 (AP).—Two persons are dead and two more are dying as the result of a gas explosion in the home of Ralph Flegal here, while the family was sitting at the dinner table.

Mr. Flegal and his 10-months-old daughter died early today in a hospital. Mrs. Flegal and an infant son are not expected to live. Gas fumes from the basement, ignited by fire in a kitchen range, are said to have caused the explosion which occurred yesterday.

him suspicious, as did also the guarded comings and goings of strangers to the villa.

Two vicious police dogs stood watch at the house, which is surrounded by a high wall, and the butcher, the baker and other tradesmen had to leave merchandise at the gate. Voluminous correspondence arrived each night by a motorcycle rider who carried a pouch from Paris.

Magistrate Heads Raiders.

A magistrate, a public prosecutor, and a clerk formed a searching party this morning.

The magistrate pounded on the door. After a long wait a woman opened it. The police entered warily, fearing a fusilade of bullets. Instead they were met by three Germans and a Pole, who refused to answer questions.

Rushing to the second floor they found a man with a little goatee, who said, smilingly, "I am Monsieur Sodroff."

But the magistrate immediately recognized him and exclaimed, "No, you are Trotzky."

Trotzky admitted his identity and showed a permit issued by the ministery of the interior in December, 1933, authorizing him to live in the suburbs of Paris.

When the officials entered, Trotzky was seated at a desk on which lay two revolvers.

Since leaving Russia, Trotzky, who lived in New York for a while before the revolution, has earned a living by writing. He had been banned from nine countries of Europe.

His daughter, Zinaida, killed herself in Berlin last year, and Trotzky placed the blame on his old foe, Joseph Stalin, head of the Russian Communist party, asserting the decree of 1932 depriving the whole Trotzky family of Russian citizenship was responsible.

3 Arrested in Theft Of Piano From Church

Theft of a piano disrupted services yesterday at Shelbourne Church, Eighteenth and M streets northeast. The Rev. Phillip E. Smith, colored pastor, told police there was a piano Saturday night, but none for Sunday services.

Police discovered the piano at a house in Wylie place northeast and arrested Bernice Wilson, 35, of the 1300 block, Wylie place northeast; Aubrey Patterson, 31, of the 1200 block, Bladensburg road, and Arthur Hammond, 34, of the 1300 block of Levis place northeast, all colored.

Wage Cuts Add Fuel To Reich Clergy Row

Berlin, April 15 (AP).—Fuel has been added to Germany's religious fires by the recent measure of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller drastically reducing clergymen's salaries and church pensions. The salary cuts run as high as 50 per cent.

The salary slashes came simultaneously with acceptance by the administration of a church budget providing expenditures during the next nine months of $275,000, including the salaries of new Nazi bishops and other officers.

Puerto Ricoans Seek 'Fair' U. S. Sugar Law

San Juan, Puerto Rico, April 15 (AP).—Insisting that the Puerto Rican sugar industry be treated as an American institution on a par with domestic mainland producers, agricultural and business organizations today cabled messages to the Senate Finance sub-committee urging fair play.

They asked that the island not be discriminated against pending legislation of sugar quotas.

De La Cruz Quit High Cuban Council

Havana, April 15 (AP).—The resignation of Carlos Manuel de la Cruz as president of the council of state has been presented to President Carlos Mendieta, it was learned today.

A palace spokesman said that the resignation was accepted. The recent appointment of De la Cruz caused a near cabinet crisis. On the day after he was named his unsuccessful opponent, Roberto Mendez Penate, committed suicide.

that is to be the high point of the festival's second day.

To pay for the queen's float, Gen. Fries' committee has decided to raise $400 by popular subscription. It has announced that sums of $1 upward will be received at the committee's headquarters, Room 200, Shoreham Building. Gen. Fries last night expressed confidence that the money would be raised without difficulty.

Though the status of the queen's float was left somewhat in doubt, little trouble was being experienced by the committee in getting an ample number of decorative vehicles for the parade. Thirty-five Washington business establishments have informed the committee that they are entering floats, some of them, according to Gen. Fries, "to cost as much as $600 flat."

Gen. Fries last night issued a list of instructions to float entrants. Each entrant must be able to show a permit signed by the District Commissioners and Gen. Fries. Each float must bear a flag to be furnished by the committee. They also must display pictures of the cherry trees blooming along the Tidal Basin, showing the Washington Monument in the background, this to make certain that such news photos as may be taken of the procession will be identified with facility throughout the Nation. Each float should be in readiness for Friday's parade by 1:30 and Saturday's by 7 p. m. The procession will assemble between Third and Sixth streets south of Pennsylvania avenue.

Sunrise Ceremony.

The festival will open with a duplication of an ancient Japanese rite—the sunrise ceremonial—at 6 a. m. Thursday. There will be a concert by the Marine Band and "Dances of the Dawy" by the Evelyn Davis and Marian Chace groups. The coronation of the queen has been scheduled for 2 p. m. Thursday at the Tida Basin, to be followed by a horse show.

Decorations for the coronation ceremonies and fro the grand ball, which will close the three-day festival Saturday night at the Mayflower Hotel, will follow the cherry blossom motif. The gowns of the queen, her 12 ladies-in-waiting and two train bearers already have been designed along that line.

The queen will be dressed in white. Two ladies-in-waiting will wear dresses of varying shades of pink chiffon and wide-brimmed brown hats. The queen's train will be carried by Elizabeth Goring Bliss and Grace Colgate Rumbough, who will wear sheel-pink, ankle-length ruffled dresses. Betsy Baker, attired in white satin knickers and blouse, will carry the queen's on a white satin cushion.

Throne Designed.

Mrs. John A. Dougherty, vice chairman of the festival reception committee, is in charge of decorations. She has designed the dias on which the queen will sit following her coronation—a 20-by-20 foot platform with a shell-shaped top covered with green canvas and overlaid with branches of cherry blossoms.

Calvert Bridge To Be Moved 80 Feet May 2

18 Hours Will Be Needed to Sidetrack Span for New One.

May 2 at 4 a. m. will be the zero hour for the moving of the Calvert Street Bridge, Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals announced yesterday.

At that hour the 1,500-ton structure will start its 80-foot trip down Rock Creek Valley to the position where it will be used for traffic until the new bridge is complete.

Already the cribs on which the bridge will ride on tracks to its new site have been constructed. These cribs will rest on 2½-inch steel rollers, which, in turn, will follow tracks down the valley.

Eighteen hours will be taken in moving the structure the 80 feet.

So firmly will the structure rest on the cribs and rollers that there will be no guying necessary to prevent possible overturn.

Horses will furnish the motive power. They will be driven on three windlasses.

With the bridge in its new place, 30 hours will be allowed for the placing of approaches and the connecting up of street car tracks.

German Trade Hint Arouses Speculation

Berlin, April 15 (U.P.).—Considerable speculation was aroused here today over the possible repercussions of a speech last night by Foreign Minister Constantine von Neurath in which he said that Germany intended to concentrate on trade with countries willing to buy German goods.

Von Neurath, speaking at the annual dinner of the Ibero-American Institute in Hamburg, added that rumors the Reich under Nazi rule hoped to produce all the nation's needs were without foundation.

Insull Denies He "Ran Away" From Arrest

Under No Charges as He Left Chicago, Says Returning Fugitive.

S. S. Exilona, at Sea, April 15 (AP). Samuel Insull declared today he did not "run away" when he left Chicago nearly two years ago for foreign parts.

"I had retired from all business connections," he said. "There was no talk of criminal action when I left. I departed as any other ordinary person would do."

Sitting in the saloon of this American vessel, en route to "face the music" in American courts which have laid fraud charges against him, he smoked his inevitable cigar, expounded a bit of philosophy, and discussed his business career.

With only a few exceptions he did not, however, touch upon his present situation.

"One of the greatest mistakes I made in my career," he said, "was failure to anticipate the extent of the after effects of the war on American business."

When a fellow passenger remarked that it looked like rougher weather in store for the night, Insull retorted:

"Why anticipate trouble? It is better to concentrate on enjoying the good things we have today."

This afternoon Insull obligingly posed for the photographer whom he had upbraided yesterday when the latter tried to snap his picture.

Insull is permitted to send and receive radio messages freely, providing that they are not for the purpose of creating legal complications at the Exilona's ports of call. He received several radiograms Saturday night.

He said he slept poorly last night, but believed it was on account of a bologna sandwich which he ate before retiring.

Insull bought up the ship's remaining stock of cigars today, consisting of four 5-centers, and told fellow passengers he had cornered the supply.

The passengers, however, perceiving that Insull was a heavy smoker, had previously raided the stock.

Cannon Case Nearing Peak

U. S. May Rest Today or Tomorrow; Seek to Trace Cash.

The crux of the Government's case against Bishop James Cannon, jr., and Miss Ada Borroughs will be reached today.

E. J. Armbruster, Department of Justice agent, who, ever since September, 1931, has been investigating the alleged conspiracy to violate the Federal corrupt practices act, will tell the jury the prosecution's version of what happened to $48,000 contributed by E. C. Jameson to the anti-Smith campaign and not reported to Congress by the defendants.

Through Armbruster's testimony, the Government will attempt to trace the "Jameson money" to Bishop Cannon's private bank accounts—and show the Southern Methodist divine conspired with his former secretary to conceal the disposition of the contributions.

With the conclusion of Armbruster's testimony, which may not come before Tuesday, the prosecution will rest.

The defense will call a dozen witnesses in an attempt to convince the jury that Bishop Cannon spent the unaccounted for $48,000 through a Virginia State anti-Smith committee. Assistant U. S. Attorney John J. Wilson declared last week there was no such committee.

All persons who play chess or who want to learn are invited. A spring series of chess games at this center, which is supervised by Mrs. A. L. Irving, community secretary, is planned. The chess group will meet regularly on Monday at 8 p. m. hereafter.

District Trains 1,000 for Teaching With Field Already Overcrowded

Here is a portable school, the type of building school officials are anxious to eliminate altogether. A number of them still are in use, however, because of the shortage of school buildings. This one is used for overflow pupils at the Ketcham School, in Anacostia.

Jobs Nonexistent, Yet Two Colleges Keep Up Heavy Supply.

This is the seventh of a series of eight articles on Washington schools.

By Felix Bruner.

As a part of the public school system the District of Columbia operates two teachers' colleges. These colleges at the present time are attended by nearly 1,000 students, 476 in the white college and 518 in the college for colored students. The teaching staff of the first is 24 and of the second is 29.

These colleges offer four-year courses leading to the degree of bachelor of science. They are comparatively new, having succeeded the old District normal schools. The first classes were graduated last year.

Difference in Opinion.

There is considerable difference of opinion among school authorities and others interested in schools about these teachers' colleges. They place an added expense on the school system, and there is a feeling even among some educators that under present conditions probably the money could be better spent elsewhere, not because these institutions do not provide excellent training for teachers, but because with reduced budgets there is little possibility of their graduates obtaining positions.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, does not agree with this contention. He feels that these colleges are giving students an opportunity for obtaining further education and for fitting themselves for useful work, should the opportunity for that work arise. He points out that most of the students in these colleges would have dropped out of school altogether had these institutions not given them an opportunity for further training.

The normal schools and then the teachers' colleges were established primarily for the purpose of giving the District a supply of trained teachers. Now the District can not even begin to absorb the teachers being turned out by these institutions. The teaching profession is one of the most overcrowded in the country. The argument that the colleges give students an opportunity to continue their education might just as well call for establishment of engineering schools, or liberal arts schools, or law schools.

More Funds Needed.

Perhaps communities should support such institutions. There always is a demand for local junior colleges. Opponents of the teachers' college idea, however, point to the serious need for more finances for the elementary and high schools and for more building facilities and point to them as the more important.

Because Dr. Ballou does not agree with this idea, a recent report made by him will be quoted here at length, in order that in fairness both sides of the argument may be presented. The writer of these articles is writing always from the point of view of a layman and makes no pretense of attempting to analyze technical school problems.

Dr. Ballou said in a recent report:

"The Wilson Teachers College and the Miner Teachers College provide residents of the District of Columbia with an opportunity to secure a four-year course in professional training for teachers of elementary schools and junior high schools. The course leads to the degree of bachelor of science in education.

Enrollment Limited.

"The enrollment in each of these institutions is limited to 600 pupils. That is, 150 pupils are admitted to the freshman class each year. Pupils may be admitted to the upper classes with advanced standing from recognized institutions until the allotment of 150 pupils for each class is reached.

"In view of the financial difficulties that high school graduates experience in going to college after completing a high school course, as well as the difficulties which they experience in securing gainful employment, the need for courses in higher education of a general character as well as of a vocational character becomes more pressing.

"It seems clear that there is an increasing gap between the end of the period of compulsory education and the age when young people may be gainfully employed. In the District of Columbia young people may leave school after 16 years of age. In view of the employment conditions, it appears reasonable to believe that in the course of a few years it will be practically impossible for young people to secure gainful employment until they are 20 or 21 years of age. Moreover, employment is almost inevitably bound to be given to young people who are best prepared vocationally for employment.

Extension Urged.

"Organized society must make some kind of provision for taking care of young people in the District of Columbia between 16 and 20 or 21 years of age. Vocational education such as is provided in our vocational schools and teachers' colleges should be intensified and extended to provide more adequate and a greater variety in its educational offerings.

"It has been the hope of residents of the District of Columbia that junior colleges might ultimately be established in the Nation's Capital to supplement the program of the teachers' colleges by offering the first two years of a general liberal arts course to residents of the District.

Dr. Ballou summarizes the needs of the teachers' colleges as follows:

"1. Additions are being made to the faculty of persons with the highest scholastic and professional qualifications to the end that the proportion to members of the faculty with higher degrees may comply with the standards of the American Association of Teachers Colleges.

"The establishment of the assistant professorship as provided in a bill which was introduced into Congress will be a material advantage in setting up this educational requirement at a reasonable cost in teachers' salaries.

More Help Needed.

"2. The secretarial and clerical assistance necessary in the general office in each teachers' college is not adequate to meet the requirements of the American Association of Teachers Colleges. Additional personnel should be provided.

"3. The number of books provided in the teachers' college libraries is at present inadequate to meet established college standards. The Miner Teachers College has been presented a gift of $25,000 for this purpose by the Miner Fund Board of the District of Columbia. Similar provision should be made for the library of the Wilson Teachers' College from public funds.

"4. The staff of librarians necessary to operate our teachers college libraries is at present insufficient. At least one or two additional employes should be provided for each college from public funds."

The final article in this series will summarize some of the District's school problems and needs.

Officials Protest Added School Burden, But Ballou Disagrees.

Medalie Asks Support For Liberal Policies

Utica, N. Y., April 15 (AP).—George Z. Medalie, of New York, former United States attorney, appealed last night at an Oneida County Bar Association banquet for support of the liberal attitude at Washington.

"The new National political experiments," Medalie said, "are worthy of the support of the entire bar of this country, not because they represent radicalism, but because they are the only true protection against the onslaught that radicalism threatens."

Stricken While Attending Patient in His Office.

Stricken with a heart attack while he was treating a patient in his office Dr. Orville Fansler, 56, of 4125 Garrison street northwest, died a short time later.

Dr. Fansler was treated by Dr. Jules Damain, 3066 Q street northwest, and continued his office duties. Soon after his first visit Dr. Damain was summoned again, but when he arrived Dr. Fansler had died.

Lincoln's Assassination Retold Vividly in Physician's Diary

Dr. Charles Taft Sought to Save His Life 69 Years Ago.

Philadelphia, April 15 (AP).—Sixty-nine years ago last night Abraham Lincoln was assassinated in Ford's Theater, Washington. Among those in the audience was Dr. Charles Taft, who attended the martyred President until death, and his diary tells anew the story of that fateful night.

The notebook, which recently came into the possession of Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, Philadelphia bibliophile, relates:

"At about 10:30 my attention was directed toward the President's box by the report of a pistol, and I saw a man jump from the stage box, shouting as he did so 'Sic semper tyrannis!' As he struck the stage he partly fell, sinking down until his knees touched the floor. A few moments of great confusion followed.

"I heard several shouts for a surgeon; this was the first intimation I had that any one had been wounded. I sprang upon the stage, calling out that I was a surgeon, when I was seized by several men and lifted up to the stage box. When I entered the President was lying on the floor, surrounded by a number of men who were trying to remove him."

Dr. Taft recounts in detail how the President was carried across the street to a private residence and how doctors sought to save his life.

"The wound ceased to bleed or discharge at about 5:30 a. m.," he continues in his diary, "and from that time on the breathing was stertorious, but gradually increased in frequency and decreased in strength up to the last breath which was drawn at 21 minutes and 5 seconds after 7; the heart did not cease to beat until 22 minutes 10 seconds past 7.

"My hand was upon the President's heart and my eye upon the watch of the surgeon general, who was standing by my side."

Douglas and W. J. Matthews, who investigated the crash, knew his name and address.

"They even asked me if I wanted the taxi driver arrested, and one of them was standing beside the car when I drove off," he added.

Although the police lookout for the driver of Cannon's car was not canceled, the Representative said no effort was made to locate him yesterday. He voluntarily appeared at the police station.

Representative Robert L. Bacon of New York, called to the hospital by Wellington and Simmons, denied reports he threatened to "stop reckless driving in Washington."

Were at Gridiron Dinner.

"The two men are friends of mine," he said. "I met them at the Gridiron dinner Saturday night. I had hardly reached home when I learned they had been hurt. I hurried to the hospital to be of service, but knew nothing of the accident's details."

Bacon was summoned by Allan N. Lindley, vice president of the Stock Exchange, a third passenger in the taxi. He escaped injury.

Indignant at police procedure in sending the lookout for his machine, Cannon aid he "would get to the bottom of the thing and find out what it's all about."

Cannon was defense counsel for Representative Francis H. Shoemaker of Minnesota, arraigned in Police Court several weeks ago on assault charges.

The much looked-out-for automobile was in Cannon's custody last night. Police Lieutenant J. H. Lee told Cannon he will be called upon to appear at the assistant corporation counsel's office for a hearing. No date was set.

Miller Rites Set Wednesday

Mrs. Robinson's Mother Will Be Buried in Arkansas.

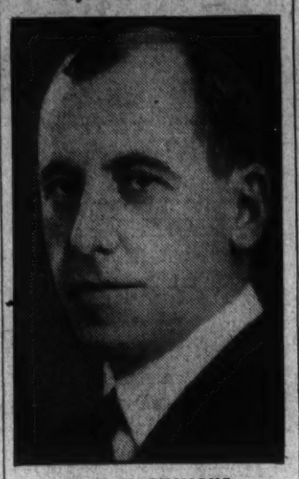
Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah G. Miller, mother-in-law of Senator Joseph Robinson of Arkansas, will be held at Little Rock on Wednesday. Mrs. Miller died here early yesterday following a stroke of apoplexy. No services were held before the remains were taken to Arkansas, starting yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Miller, who was widely known in official circles, had made her home with Senator and Mrs. Robinson since the death of her husband, Jesse Miller, 12 years ago. The Robinson home is at 100 Maryland avenue northeast.

Mrs. Miller was born at Brunswick, Tenn., but moved, with her parents, to Lonoke, Ark., when she was a girl. She had lived there until moving to Washington. She was nearly 82 years of age.

In addition to Mrs. Robinson, the survivors are two sons, Charles G. Miller, of Lonoke, and H. Grady Miller, of Little Rock.

Injured in Crash



E. H. H. SIMMONS, former New York Stock Exchange head, who was injured early yesterday when a taxi, in which he was riding and an automobile driven by Representative Raymond J. Cannon were in collision.

U. S. Farm Aid Over Billion

Loans by Land Banks, Other Units Cited by Emmerich.

Farm Credit Administration loans to farmers now exceed $1,000,000,000, Herbert Emmerich, administrative assistant of the FCA, said here last night in an address to the Washington Chapter of the American Association of University Women.

More than one-half of the total amount has been disbursed by Federal land banks making first mortgage loans on their own account and first or second mortgage loans on behalf of the land bank commissioner, Emmerich said.

From May 1, 1933, through April 13, 1934, approximately $1,100,000,000 was loaned to aid agriculture by all institutions under the FCA, he said.

Systematic Gang Robs 6 Stores in 6 Blocks

Six stores in a radius of six blocks were robbed yesterday, according to police. The thieves systematically went from store to store, jimmying rear windows. Total loot was $67 in currency, 24 neckties and $15 worth of cigarettes.

Police said a store was broken into in the 500 block of Fifteenth street southeast, another in the 400 block of Fifteenth street southeast, two more in the 300 block of the same street, one in the 1300 block of Pennsylvania and a sixth in the 500 block of Eighth street southeast.

Italians Use Farms to Aid Prison Reform

Tripoli Prisoners Urged to Take Pride in Toil.

Rome (U.P.).—The penal legislation and prison regulations of Italy's African colony of Tripolitania are advanced more socially and scientifically than those operating in the home country.

Prisoners in Tripolitania, whether native or Italian, are whenever it is possible, employed on the land, and jailing and solitary confinement practically are abolished. Such treatment is only enforced for dangerous and rebellious prisoners.

An important land reclamation scheme has been carried out by the prisoners of the Tripoli prison on a large piece of land near the jail.

The extent of this reclamation is some 450 acres and the prisoners, Arabs, Jews and Negroes, have turned what was a barren desert into a flourishing farm. About 12,000 olive trees have been planted, 10,000 almond trees and 70,000 vines, between 4,000 and 5,000 fruit trees of various kinds and 14,000 forestal plants. Every year, sowings of various kinds of grain are made, and the harvest regularly gathered.

Only those prisoners who are too old or too sick are excused from this work on the land, which modern sociologists declare is the only hope and salvation for the criminally inclined.

The latter become interested in their work. They have the pleasure of seeing the fruit of their toil, and if they behave well when in prison, they are given land to cultivate themselves when they are freed.

The three principal races which inhabit the Lybian prisons, Europeans, African Jews and Arabs always are kept apart. This is one of the dominating ideas of the prison system, and is extended to the working parties taken out to cultivate the land.

The recent excavations of Leptis Magna and Cyrene, which have added so many fine relics of Roman civilization to the Italian and colonial museums, chiefly are worked by colonial prisoners.

The Tripoli prison dates from Turkish times, but has been modernized and rebuilt. New prisons have been constructed at Homs and Misurata.

Farley Rescinds Furlough Order

restoration of service curtailment under the provisions of the order. Deliveries in residential districts from three to four daily and in mixed business and residential districts from two to three daily.

Will Increase Crews.

Longer hours for window service will be restored. Distribution crews in large postoffices will be increased and additional allowances for substitutes will be provided. The restoration of service will provide additional employment for substitutes.

"In my order of March 2, I stated:

'This action is imperative in order to keep the expenditures within budget allotments. In the event there should be a marked increase in the business of the department before June 30, I shall be most happy to rescind such parts or all of this order as the circumstances may justify. In any event, the provisions of this order are applicable only for a period of 4 months.'

"It is a source of much satisfaction to me that conditions have so improved that I feel justified in carrying out my purpose as set forth above.

"I take this occasion to express my appreciation to both the employees of the postal service and the public for the sympathetic cooperation which has been extended the department in its efforts to meet a trying and difficult situation. The department takes pride in the service which it gives the public and every effort will be made to continue to improve this service.

"The increase in the volume of mail is regarded as an accurate barometer of improved business conditions throughout the country, which, I am confident, will bring much satisfaction to the people generally."

Capt. D. P. Culpepper Dies at Portsmouth

Portsmouth, Va., April 15 (Spl.). Capt. D. P. Culpepper, 72, for many years a member of the Portsmouth Police Department, died here yesterday.

Surviving are his wife, two sons, Carroll E. Culpepper, of Ocean View, and Herbert P. Culpepper, of this city; two sisters, Miss Millie Culpepper, and seven grandchildren. The fneral will be held at the residence tomorrow.

50 Made Homeless As Fire Hits Town

Snow Hill, Md., April 15 (AP).—More than 50 colored persons were homeless as result of a fire which destroyed 10 smal dwellings and a flour mill here today.

Eighty firemen, members of volunteer departments from this and four other Eastern Shore towns, fought the blaze several hours. Tonight firemen were left on guard to prevent another outbreak.

Two Spinsters Slain By Thief Taking $200

Havana, Fla., April 15 (AP).—The slaying of two spinsters for $200 they had hoarded in a trinket chest was discovered near here today. They were Miss Nancy Burns, 75, and her niece, Miss Annie Burns, 47.

The bodies were discovered by Mrs. Jim Strickland, a neighbor. The women had been shot.

Bishop Urges D. A. R. Protect Homes

Memorial services to Daughters of the American Revolution who have died since April, 1933, were observed yesterday at Memorial Continental Hall. Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general, is shown placing a wreath at D. A. R. Memorial.

He urged women to fight the spread of divorce.

The bishop told his congregation that all patriotism should be predicated on religion. To take religion out of the life of the people would mean that even Congress could not save the Nation from moral and physical destruction, he said.

"Without loyalty to God," exclaimed the bishop, "patriotism is sure to be on the wane. I have been told that our men in public life are not devoted to religion. I do not believe it and I have seen many instances to the contrary. But should it be even partially true, I would have no confidence in the legislation evolved by legislators without belief in God.

"We need to be reminded in this critical time that this country was born as a Christian Nation and thus it must continue if it wishes to remain secure. Its security does not lie in the cleverness of legislation passed nor in man-power, wealth and resources. For often such conditions have prevailed and yet nations have declined."

High Morality Stressed.

Bishop Freeman called upon women to maintain high moral standards. He warned his auditors that in these troublous times elaborate social functions might precipitate a revolution in American life and referred to a social function "costing tens of thousands of dollars, held in a certain Washington hotel where, at the same time, crusts of bread were being doled out to starving men, women and children."

Through his observations of his 40 years in the Christian ministry, Bishop Freeman expressed the belief that 80 per cent of beneficial and religious work is either inspired or maintained by women. The situation today in the Christian church, he said, calls for increasing loyalty from women, because the church faces more serious days than it ever has known. He acknowledged the debt Washintgon Cathedral owes to women and said that without their help probably the cathedral would not be in its present development today.

Three sessions of the Forty-third Continental Congress today will open a week's deliberation of patriotic issues. These sessions will be presided over by Mrs. Russell William Magna, the president general, and will be marked by processions of flags, special music, greetings by heads of other patriotic organizations and National notables.

Hotels were filled with delegates to the convention, mingling with thousands of other visitors here for the cherry blossom festival. Restaurants, theaters and sightseeing spots reported capacity crowds throughout the day.

Secretary Dern to Speak.

National defense will be outlined to the delegates tonight by Secretary of War George Dern and the Assistant Secertary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt.

Due to pressure of business, President Roosevelt will not address the Congress, but Mrs. Roosevelt will speak on "The Education of Mountain Children" Friday morning.

At this morning's session Mrs. Magna will give her annual address, which is awaited with keen interest, for in it she will sound the keynote of policy for the last year of her administration. National defense, patriotic education, preservation of historic spots and objects and other objectives of the D. A. R. will be discussed in this address.

Mrs. John Y. Richardson will entertain at a breakfast this morning at the Mayflower in honor of the delegation from Oregon and prominent Pacific Coast women in Washington. She also has invited the ten candidates for vice president general.

While the contest for president general and national officers will not take place until the 1933 Congress, the D. A. R. political pot is boiling briskly.

Two Seek High Office.

There are only two announced candidates for president general, Mrs. William A. Becker, of New Jersey, and Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine. Mrs. G. Wallace W. Hanger, of the District of Columbia, former State regent and National officer and chairman of the program committee of this congress, looms as a third candidate possibility. Friends of Mrs. Hanger are urging her to enter the race, and to make a formal announcement of her candidacy before the adjournment of this congress.

Under the present system of campaigning in the D. A. R. it is almost necessary that a candidate for president general announce her intentions a year in advance in order that her qualifications can be discussed by chapter and State conferences and the States have the privilege of instructing their delegates.

It is regarded as doubtful that Mrs. Russell William Magna, the present president general, will take any part in the campaign. But it is pointed out that Mrs. Magna did select Mrs. Hanger as program committee chairman of this congress, which will bring the Washington woman into the foreground. Mrs. Hanger was a runner-up for president general when Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook was elected.

The entrance of a third candidate also would mean that three entire slates for National officers would be presented to the voters' next congress.

States Form Combinations.

Since four of the 11 candidates offered by the States for the seven vice presidential vacancies this year will have to be eliminated, State combinations are being effected by the State regents to "put over" their candidates. All 11 candidates have been nominated by their State conferences which, under the rules of the D. A. R., must be held in the States before the annual Congress.

The West Coast delegations are sharply at issue over the candidate from California, Mrs. Frederick F. Gundrum, and the candidate from Oregon, Mrs. John Y. Richardson, for vice president general. Managers for both Mrs. Gundrum and Mrs. Richardson are demanding the other withdraw. It does not seem possible that two women from the West Coast will be elected. The proponents of Mrs. Richardson point out that the candidate for reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution, Mrs. Emmet Wilson, to be voted on at this congress, is from California. Mrs. Wilson is filling the unexpired term of the late Mrs. Frank Toms, of that State.

To Tell of Flying.

With the record of hundreds of flying hours behind her and having flown over nearly all the States in the Union in order to reach the far-flung chapters of the organization with personal messages, Mrs. Magna is the first chief executive of the society to use airplanes for transportation.

Today, when she presents her report as president general, Mrs. Magna will tell the 4,000 delegates and alternates that her flying experiences have been constructive and educational, rather than thrilling, and never terrifying.

"I have had infinitely more real thrills on a roller coaster than in any plane," declared Mrs. Magna yesterday. "My advice to anyone who wishes to take a flight is not to "go up" just for fun. In this event the passenger is self-conscious and analytical. Decide on a trip, have a definite mission, take a plane and fly there."

The year's work will be described by Mrs. Magna in detail. It is understood that despite the depression the membership of the D. A. R. has not slumped any appreciable degree and that a constant flow of new members has come in through the affiliated society of the Children of the American Revolution.

Other Officers to Report.

Reports from other National officers will feature this afternoon session. The treasurer general, Miss Katherine Nettleton, of Connecticut, will report that finances of the organization are in a healthy condition. From Mrs. Frank Howland Parcells, organizing secretary general, will come word of new chapters formed. The curator general, Miss Myra Hazard, and the librarian general, Mrs. Frank Madison Dick, will tell of the new relics, books and papers that have come to the society's care within the last year. The registrar general, Mrs. Stanley Forman Reed, will announce the exact membership.

Tribute was paid yesterday afternoon in Memorial Continental Hall to hundreds of patriotic leaders of the D. A. R. who died the last year.

The memorial service was conducted by the president general, Mrs. Magna, and the chaplain general, Mrs. Raymond Grant Kimbell.

After the processional, Mrs. Magna gave the call to remembrance and the audience responded in unison with this quotation:

"They are not dead, who live in hearts they leave behind. In those whom they have blessed they live again. Eternal life is theirs throughout the years and time declares their immortality."

Prayer and Scripture readings followed, after a candle lighting ceremony, and the names of the dead who had held National office were called and eulogized.

Mrs. Magna paid tribute to Mrs. Frank Phelps Toms, former reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution, who was killed in an accident last year. Her candle was lighted by Mrs. Frederick F. Goodrum, of California.

Deceased Members Honored.

Mrs. Magna then lighted the candle in behalf of the members who have died since the last congress. Other tributes and candle lightings for National officers took place.

Charter members: Mary E. McDonald (Mrs. Marshall), National No. 25, Mount Vernon Chapter, Virginia; Delia Claiborne Buckner (Mrs. Simon Bolliver), National No. 43, at large; Mary E. Wadsworth (Mrs. H. N.), National No. 211, New York City Chapter, N. Y.; Sally Ewing Marshall Hardy (Mrs., National No. 311, John Marshall Chapter, Kentucky; Mary E. Bundy (Mrs. J. C.), National No. 359, Fort Dearborn Chapter, Illinois; Sara Lida Slocum Bindley (Mrs. Albion), National No. 735, Pittsburgh Chapter, Pennsylvania; honary vice president general, Eleanor Holmes Lindsay (Mrs. William), Frankfort Chapter, Kentucky; Evelyn Fellows Masury (Mrs. Charles H.), General Israel Putnam Chapter, Massachusetts; Alice T. N. Noel (Mrs. Edmund F.), Benjamin Humphrey Chapter, Mississippi; Anne Higgins Perley (Mrs. Allen P.), Lycoming Chapter, Pennsylvania; Marie B. Smith (Mrs. James Lowry), Esther McCrory Chapter, Texas; Lucinda Frances Pierce Thummel (Mrs. Warren) Jonas Bronck Chapter, N. Y.

Former State regents: Nettie A. Ashenfelter (Mrs. Singleton M.), Jacob Bennett Chapter, New Mexico; Fanny I. Burt Barnes (Mrs. R. P.), Lew Wallace Chapter, New Mexico; Mattie Dade Vaughan Boone (Mrs. Eli G.), member at large; Verona Mapel Brannon (Mrs. Linn), Trans-Alleghany Chapter, West Virginia; Kate Livington Egan (Mrs. Dennis), Katherine Livingston Chapter, Florida; Clara D. Phillips Heavner (Mrs. Clarke W.), Elizabeth Zane Chapter, West Virginia; Corrine Crenshaw McCormack (Mrs. Joseph N.), at large; Charlotte D. I. Steere (Mrs. Frederick Eugene), Aloha Chapter, Hawaii; Lalla D. Thomas (Mrs. Warren E.), Multnomah Chapter, Oregon.

Benediction by the chaplain general concluded the service, after which the president general, accompanied by the D. A. R. memorial committee, of which Mrs. Raymond G. Kimbell, chaplain general, is chairman, and Mrs. G. Wallace W. Hanger, vice chairman, went to the memorial statue, between Constitution Hall and the Administration Building, erected in honor of the four pioneer women of the D. A. R. Miss Mary Desha, Mrs. Ellen Hardin Walworth, Miss Eugenia Washington and Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood. There a wreath was placed.

Little Daughter of Missing Pilot In China Is Certain He'll Return

15 Fliers Scan Hangchow Bay, But Fail to Find Lost Air Liner.

Shanghai, April 15 (AP).—A child's confidence in her father added a bitter touch tonight to an airplane mystery which may have claimed the lives of three Americans and one Japanese.

Roberta Gast, 2-year-old daughter of Robert Gast, of Louisville, Ky., pilot of the air liner that seemingly was swallowed up by the fogs of Hangchow Bay Tuesday, is sure her daddy will return, although her elders' fears increased.

She did not know about apprehensions that her father lay at the bottom of the bay, the "Graveyard of China." For the first time tonight she seemingly realized that he hadn't returned according to schedule.

An expression of worry momentarily passed over her face. With a toss of her golden curls she asked a newspaperman: "Where's my daddy?"

Before the correspondent had a chance to reply, courage and confidence returned and Roberta's face was again wreathed in smiles.

"I know my daddy will come back," she assured herself. "I love my daddy, and he loves me."

With Gast on the flight were Ivan Carlson, of Donna, Tex.; James Frink, of Miami, Fla., and a Japanese business man. Their plane was on the Shanghai-Canton air-mail route.

Since Tuesday planes and ships have scoured the Hangchow Bay area and beyond.

Miss Perkins Asks Change in Labor Building

Revisions Requested May Delay Occupancy Until Fall.

The new Labor Building, Siamese twin of the Interstate Commerce Commission Building, to which it is joined by an auditorium wing, is up against new difficulties.

Its completion delayed for months by union disputes, the building now is facing another hurdle in the form of alterations proposed by Secretary Frances Perkins. None has been given the official okay yet, but if the specifications are changed to conform with Miss Perkins' wishes, occupancy of the monumental edifice may be set back until late summer or early fall, it was learned yesterday.

She would change her private suite only slightly, the biggest idea being construction of an anteroom. All the other desired changes would benefit the Secretary's subordinates in the way of improved flooring, more healthful lighting fixtures, acoustical ceilings to deaden the sound of tabulating machines, &c.

To date all of the changes are still in the paper stage, depending on the mercies of the Budget Bureau and Comptroller General's office. The White House, too, has been consulted in the matter. Quotations have been furnished on certain alterations, Edward A. Burnap, superintendent for James Stewart & Co., contractors, said last night, but he has not been ordered to proceed with any.

If jurisdictional disputes cease and no drastic changes are made, the interconnected buildings can be finished in about six weeks, Burnap said. At present plasterers are out on strike in protest against the setting of acoustical stone by marble setters.

Film Fame Gone, Karl Dane, Broke, Commits Suicide

Hollywood, April 15 (AP).—The body of Karl Dane, one of the silent screen's outstanding comedians, who found bitter disappointment in suicide, lay in the county morgue today, unclaimed.

The actor, who skyrocketed to fame in "The Big Parade," and later was starred, shot himself to death in a modest apartment last night. He was penniless at his death, and had been living off the bounty of friends, although his salary at one time was reported to have been $1,500 weekly.

The coroner, announcing no inquest would be held, said the body would be released to a private undertaker as soon as anyone came forward to claim it.

Dane lapsed into obscurity with the passing of the silent picture. His voice was unsuitable for talking pictures, producers said. For a while, the actor returned to his former profession of automobile mechanic, and later operated a hamburger stand.

Dane was born in Copenhagen, Denmark. He entered the United States as Rasmus Karl Thekelsen Gottlieb. He changed his name to Karl Dane when he applied for citizenship.

Police Use Catalogs To Fend Off Bullets

Oklahoma City, April 5 (AP).—Federal officers, responding to calls to chase machine-gun desperadoes of the Southwest, snatch up their pistols and their mail-order catalogues. As their car speeds down the highway, they adjust the catalogues beneath their vests.

Some contend that while a steel vest won't stop a machine-gun bullet, the bulky volume will.

Byrd Men Talk to London, Half A World Away

Little America, Antarctica, April 15 (via Mackay Radio) (AP).—From this ice-sheathed area, where winter is setting in, the second Byrd Antarctic expedition today put on a broadcast to London, where spring has taken command.

From a drift-covered shack, members of the expedition talked nearly half-way around the world—some 11,000 miles.

A message written by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, in which he said perils of his isolation south of the base in conducting meteorological observations were greatly exaggerated, was read.

The temperature today was 86 degrees below zero. Darkness will set in April 19 and will continue until August 21.

Fall Compels Swedish King to Give Up Tennis

Paris, April 15 (U.P.).—His doctors today ordered King Gustav Adolph of Sweden to discontinue his tennis playing temporarily as a result of a fall last week during a match.

probably saved the life of Ensign Dunning."

Admiral Sellers described the rescue as "one of the most remarkable feats in the history of naval aviation." Lieut. Whitmore S. Butts, in a single-seater fighting plane, preceded Ballman to the scene of the accident and attempted also to drop a rubber boat, but failed, Admiral Sellers radioed.

Efficiency Revealed.

"The conduct of fleet exercises during the period April 10 to 13 demonstrated a gratifying degree of battle efficiency by the United States fleet," the commander in chief reported." While certain forces and vessels at times fell below the standard of war efficiency set by the commander in chief, the general efficiency of all forces of the fleet was very high, and many forces and ships gave remarkable demonstrations of efficiency. Outstanding among these performances were the tactical handling of the battleships and the operations of the aircraft carriers and Submarine Division 12; also many destroyer units made highly effective and spectacular night torpedo attacks at point-blank range. On many occasions light and heavy cruisers gave splendid performances. The communications of the fleet were of a very high order."

Leaving Pacific waters for the first time in two years, the fleet is approaching the Canal Zone on its way to New York, where a Presidential review is scheduled June 1.

Maryland Vote Seekers Await Ritchie Course

By James C. Mullikin.

Baltimore, April 15.—On all fronts, except the Ritchie front, the political wars in Maryland are becoming more intense.

Harry W. Nice, aspirant for the Republican nomination for Governor, has just returned to Baltimore after a more or less triumphant tour of leading State centers. Webster F. Smith, also a candidate for the G. O. P. gubernatorial nomination, is busy lining up support in all sectors.

Dr. Charles Conley, Frederick County seeker of the Democratic nomination for Governor, is actively pushing his campaign to the east and to the west of the Chesapeake Bay.

Howard W. Jackson, Democratic Mayor of Baltimore, reported to be receptive to a call of his party to run for the Annapolis post, is quietly but consistently lining up support here and there.

An announcement is expected momentarily from Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Republican, that he will seek renomination to the Senate. An already avowed G. O. P. aspirant to the Senate, Dr. Joseph I. France, of Port Deposit, is girding for the fray.

All Eyes on Ritchie.

All are active and most are willing to talk, all except Gov. Ritchie, Maryland's four-time chief executive.

Gov. Ritchie's silence can be interpreted in several ways. Some think he is planning to run for a fifth term. Some believe he will run for the Senate against Goldsborough or whoever the Republicans nominate. And a few believe he is ready to retire to private life.

Upon Gov. Ritchie's decision apparently hinges the entire political situation.

The notable "Ritchie luck" now seems to be on the decline. He is not highly regarded on the Eastern Shore, owing to his stand in the recent lynching, and there is considerable doubt that he could carry more than one of the nine trans-Chesapeake counties. Western Maryland, the home of Dr. Conley, is considered ripe for an anti-Ritchie revolt, particularly in view of the fact it is normally Republican by a small majority.

Strong in Baltimore.

Only in Baltimore does the Governor's strength remain high. But Baltimore contains half of the State's population and, even if he should lose most of the counties, it is possible that he would poll a sufficiently strong city vote to gain reelection.

As a candidate for Senator, his chances are considered more than good. The feeling that he has been Governor too long might be translated into a sentiment that his usefulness could be put to better use in Washington than in Annapolis. Many who would not vote for him for Governor, it is felt, would cast their ballot to send him to the Senate. As for his retiring to private life, that is considered so highly improbable that no one regards it seriously.

So, until Ritchie decides on his future course the political situation in Maryland remains more or less chaotic. Persevering Republicans can afford to scurry up and down the State, hammering on their political fences early and late, but no Democrat, except the daring Dr. Conley, can take the chance of getting in the Governor's way.

Jackson Chances Good.

When he does decide the fun will begin. If he wants to go back to Annapolis for a fifth time, it is unlikely anyone, again excepting the ubiquitous Dr. Conley, will oppose him. He will probably have a pretty clear field, but there will be so many candidates for the Senate that the voters will have difficulty telling them apart.

If Ritchie runs for the Senate, it is generally regarded as likely that Mayor Jackson will run for the governorship. He has been quietly creating a Jackson-for-something sentiment throughout the State for the past year or so. Running under the Ritchie auspices, he would have an excellent chance of going to Annapolis.

But it's all up to Gov. Ritchie. He must clear the path. The only question is—when will he do it?

Nazarene Church Session Is Ended

Ordination Climaxes Rally at Cumberland, Md.

Cumberland, Md., April 15 (Spl.). Ordination exercises featured the closing day of the annual assembly of the Washington-Philadelphia district, Church of the Nazarene.

Reports of the committees on rescue work, orphanage, deaconess, foreign missions, pastoral support, ministrial relief and publishing interests were read. George E. Hudson, of Baltimore, district treasurer, reported disbursements of $3,606.31. The meeting next year will be held at Bloomsburg, Pa.

A resolution was adopted voicing opposition to the use of alcoholic beverages and tobacco and favoring "temperance in all good things, such as eating and drinking." The resolution criticizes the failure of the people to vote, "thus permitting the repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

Teachers of Jefferson County Named May 7

Charles Town, W. Va., April 15 (Spl.).—Appointment of Jefferson County teachers for 1934-35 will be made May 7 by the school board, it was announced yesterday by I. N. Bonham, superintendent of schools.

Applications should be filed by April 30, Mr. Bonham stated. "Practically all" of the present teaching staff has applied for reappointment.

State uniform examinations for noncertified applicants will be held in Jefferson County June 7 and 8 and July 12 and 13.

Tercentenary Pageant Parts Being Assigned

Old Cannon Are to Be Set Up This Week at Old City.

Leonardtown, Md., April 15 (Spl.). Senator Allen Coad, chairman of the St. Marys County Tercentenary Commission, reports that acceptances of parts in the pageant, scheduled for June 16, are being received. Baltimore will sponsor the enactment of the wedding scene of Charles Calvert, third Lord Baltimore to the Widow Sewell, which took place at Mattapany, historical home on the Patuxent River, as its part in the St. Marys City pageant.

Mrs. Cathleen Coontz, of Washington, writer and directress of the pageant, visited St. Marys City today to look over the grounds preparatory to casting the parts which will begin on Monday, when Mrs. Coontz meets members of the St. Marys County Tercentenary Commission here.

Not later than Wednesday, two of four old cannon, found in the river near old Fort Point, will be set up in front of the Memorial Statehouse now nearing completion.

The cannon were unearthed from the bed of the St. Marys River many years after the old fort that had guarded the harbor at that point had been washed away.

The cannon have been in the care of the priests at St. Inigoes Villa, who have collected antiques.

Hanover County Aid Heads Named

Ashland, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—Miss Dorothy Jones will continue as relief director of Hanover County and will have charge of the FERA program here.

Miss Buford Best, director of the Hanover County office of the National Reemployment Service, will continue to supply work cards for employment of PWA and also on Works Division, FERA projects.

Appointments under the new relief program include Mrs. Mable Terrell, of Beaverdam, garden director; W. C. Blanton, jr., of Ashland, bookkeeper, and W. S. Meredith, of Rockville, projects director. Officers of the new relief organization will soon abandon the CWA office in the D. B. Cox Building and move to the office on England street now occupied by the reemployment service.

Tale of Virginia Judge Off Press

Justice Crutchfield Subject of Gwathmey's Book.

Richmond, April 15 (Spl.).—"Justice John—Tales from the Courtroom of the Virginia Judge," by John H. Gwathmey, came from the presses of the Dietz Printing Co. yesterday. It is the first book about Justice John J. Crutchfield, who served as judge of Richmond's police court for 32 years until his death in 1920 and became celebrated throughout the country for his wit and humor and his "homemade" brand of justice.

The frontispiece and decorations are in pencil by Miss Lucy Payne Pinder, the young Richmond artist who illustrated Gwathmey's "Legends of Virginia Courthouse," which was published last July.

Takoma Park Plans Caucus

Mayor's Job, Three Council Seats Open; Election to Be May 7.

Plans for the annual town caucus will be discussed at the meeting of the council of Takoma Park, Md., tonight at 8 o'clock. Candidates will be named for mayor and to fill three vacancies on the town council at the caucus April 23.

Registration officers to sit May 1 and 2 from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. to register new voters and officials for the town election May 7, must be appointed tomorrow. The terms of Mayor Frederick L. Lewton and Councilmen Boyer, Remsen and Sherburne will expire June 1.

It is expected that Mayor Lewton and the three council incumbents will seek reelection. The revised town charter requires that one member of the town council be elected from Prince Georges County.

Mayor Lewton is finishing his first term in office, having defeated Ben G. Davis when the latter ran for his fourth term.

Presbyterians Meet Tuesday At Staunton

Tribute Will Be Paid Dr. A. M. Fraser, Once Leading Figure.

Staunton, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—When Lexington Presbytery holds its spring meeting here Tuesday and Wednesday, tribute will be paid the Rev. A. M. Fraser, for more than 30 years pastor of First Church, where the meeting will be held. Dr. Fraser was once moderator of the General Assembly, which embraces the entire Southern Church's territory; and also served as moderator of the Synod of Virginia, as moderator of this presbytery, and was president of Mary Baldwin College.

The Rev. Holmes Rolston, of Rockbridge Baths, will preach the opening sermon Tuesday at 11 a. m., after which a moderator will be selected to succeed Campbell Pancake. Mr. Pancake being a layman, in all probability a minister will succeed.

Morning and afternoon sessions on Tuesday and Wednesday will be devoted principally to business, while the evening programs will be of an inspirational nature, with special emphasis on various mission and educational causes.

On Thursday and Friday of this week Lexington Presbyterial will meet in Waynesboro.

The United States Government erected this monument to the memory of 3,384 Confederate soldiers and sailors who died while prisoners of war at Point Lookout, Md., about 15 miles from Leonardtown. An undetermined number of the unidentified dead prisoners are beneath this monument. The bodies of others were shipped to their native States following the Civil War. The monument, backed by evergreens, stands close by the side of the Potomac River.

D. A. R. Indorsement Is Sought For New Memorial Boulevard

(Associated Press.)

Resolutions calling for indorsement of the plan to create a new Federal boulevard in Virginia, to be known as the Thomas Jefferson-James Monroe Memorial highway, will be presented to the National convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution here this week.

The plan already has the approval of the Virginia section.

The proposal, which already has been laid before Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Public Works administrator, calls for the construction of a boulevard from Virginia Federal Aid Route No. 5 at a point near Shadwell, birthplace of Thomas Jefferson, to Monticello, his home, and with a spur leading to Ash Lawn, the home of James Monroe, and thence westward to the University of Virginia, at a point to be established on United States highway 29.

Headed by officials of the Monticello Foundation and the Charlottesville Chamber of Commerce, the plan was outlined recently to Administration officials, who expressed keen interest. The plan calls for the restoration of Jefferson's Mill at Shadwell. The road would be approximately 7 miles long.

Should the National Park Service determine to build the new boulevard, it would be the fourth road of this type in Virginia. The Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard was the first constructed. Others are the Colonial National Monument boulevard and the Skyline drive through the Shenandoah National Park and connecting it with the Great Smoky Mountain National Park in Tennessee.

Senator Walcott and Maryland Sportsmen Guests at Woodmont

Host Is Told Roosevelt May Visit Great Preserve.

Hagerstown, Md., April 15 (Spl.). United States Senator Frederic C. Walcott of Connecticut was the guest of honor at a dinner and trout fishing party this week-end at the Woodmont Rod & Gun Club, near Hancock.

Henry P. Bridges, secretary and treasurer of the club, the host, also entertained a number of prominent Maryland sportsmen, including. Gen. B. Howell Griswold, Alfred Jenkins Shriver, Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore, Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner 3d, Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr., Senator William D. Byron and others.

It also was announced that President Roosevelt plans to visit the Woodmont Club and preserve this year and be the sixth President of the United States to sit in the famous "President's Chair," cherished possession of the club. Five other Presidents have hunted or fished on the preserve since its organization in 1873 by Rear Admiral "Fighting Bob" Evans and have been seated in the chair.

Senator Walcott outlined the program for game conservation. He paid a tribute to the Civilian Conservation Camps for its part in game conservation.

Kidnap Probers Seek Third Man

2 Suspects Free on Bond in Woman's Abduction.

Hampton, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—Police of Hampton, Newport News and the surrounding territory today were hunting for a third man believed to have been involved in the kidnaping last Monday of Mrs. Beulah Peterson, wife of Roy Peterson, a service station operator in Newport News.

R. T. Newton, of Riverview, and H. D. Hanson, of Langley Field, arrested yesterday on warrants sworn out at the request of Peterson, were free on bail pending arraignment before Justice A. M. Tennis in magistrate's court Friday.

Their arrest came after Mrs. Peterson reported having been abducted from her home Monday, under threat of violence, by a soldier, given what she believes to have been "knockout" drops in a soft drink and detained in Phoebus Monday night. Mrs. Peterson said she remembered nothing until she was released Tuesday morning.

Montgomery Clinic A Model for State

System to Aid Maladjusted Will Be Copied.

Bimonthly child guidance clinics being held in Montgomery County are expected to serve as a guide for the system to be extended throughout Maryland.

Borrowing from Montgomery County's plan, the State department of health will institute a system of mental hygiene clinics to assist maladjusted pupils falling behind in their work in public schools. At a recent meeting of psychiatrists, the State was divided into districts of from one to four counties in which from four to six clinics will be held annually.

The tentative program calls for a clinic every second month in Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Carroll and Frederick counties; four years in the district embracing Cecil, Kent and Queen Annes Counties; four in Dorchester, Talbot and Caroline Counties; four in Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester Counties; four in Anne Arundel, Prince Georges and Howard Counties and four in Charles, St. Marys and Calvert Counties.

Hagerstown Opens Two Roads Soon

Hagerstown, Md., April 15 (Spl.). Two traffic arteries leading into Hagerstown, both from the north, will be opened this week after having been closed several months for CWA improvement work.

Pennsylvania avenue, which is the entrance to the city from Route 11, known as the Shenandoah Trail, has been completely rebuilt. Potomac avenue, entrance from Pennsylvania points, also was improved.

Two other projects, incompleted when CWA ended, are being finished under the new relief program. They are the municipal stadium and the athletic field at City Park, both of which will be finished by May 1, in time for the opening of the baseball season.

Three Suspects Held After Freights Thefts

Cumberland, Md., April 15 (Spl.). Herbert and Robert Helmick, brothers, and Lester Davis, all of Ridgeley, W. Va., opposite this city, are being held in jail at Keyser in default of $2,000 bond.

They were arrested by Baltimore & Ohio and Western Maryland police on charges of grand larceny, in connection with robberies in the local railroad yards. Davis, a former resident of Barton, this county, is a World War veteran.

Injured Miner Expires At Frostburg Hospital

Barton, Md., April 15 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Reynolds, near here, for George Custer, 66, who died at Miners Hospital, Frostburg, where he had been a patient two months with a broken back, received when caught by a fall of rock in a mine at Reynolds.

Besides his widow, 11 children survive.

Lancaster County's Records to 1652 'Worth a Million'

Judge at Fredericksburg Proposes Fund to Preserve Them.

Kilmarnock, Va., April 15 (Spl.). That the records of Lancaster County prior to the Civil War are worth more than $1,000,000 was the statement of Judge Alvin T. Embrey, of Fredericksburg, addressing members and guests of the Kilmarnock Rotary Club.

The records extend back to 1652, when Lancaster County was formed from Northumberland County. Records are available in the clerk's office, the judge stated, for tracing titles to property back to the original grant or patent issued by the King of England, but it is impossible at the present to do this because of lack of classification.

Judge Embrey stressed the practical value of the records aside from the historic, commercial and legal aspects and stated the necessity of doing something to preserve them within the next five years. He stated that he saw bookworms eating records which had not seen the light of day for 200 years, though the pests could be killed with powder as flies and other insects could be killed.

The speaker suggested a 10-cent levy in the county for two years, to raise $7,000, which he said would be sufficient to recondition the records and install a clerk's office as an addition to the courthouse, with room for the clerk and the records.

Garden Clubs To Aid Tourists

16 Information Offices to Be Open for Virginia Historic Week.

Richmond, April 15 (Spl.). Garden clubs throughout Virginia were preparing today to open 16 information offices to route crowds expected here April 23 to 28 to visit Virginia's old homes and gardens during Virginia Historic Garden Week.

More than 150 homes, gardens and shrines are being opened.

Headquarters are to be opened Monday morning in Washington, Alexandria, Fredericksburg, Richmond, Gloucester, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Orange, Leesburg, Williamsburg, Winchester, Warrenton and Charlottesville. Automobile clubs, tourist agencies and other directional services are distributing material on Garden Week. The United States Park Service recently completed plans for opening two new areas at the Colonial National Monument, Yorktown, for Garden Week.

Guide service and free lecture service will be given. A guide service is being organized at the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Battlefield Park, at Fredericksburg, under the direction of Horace H. Smith.

Mrs. Jane Roberts Burial Rites Held

Pioneer English Settler Dies at Frostburg.

Frostburg, Md., April 15 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held here today for Mrs. Jane Boyns Roberts, 85, who came here 64 years ago from St. Just, Cornwall, England, as a bride.

Burial was in the family lot in Rose Hill Cemetery, Cumberland.

Mrs. Roberts, widow of Christopher Roberts, was, with the exception of Benjamin Jenkins, the last of an English group who came here in the early seventies to establish homes. She is survived by two sons and four daughters, including Mrs. Grace R. Peele, Rich Square, N. C.

Former Stock Man Victim of Heart Attack.

Mr. Beard resided at Weyer's Cave until about six years ago, when he retired from farming and stock raising and came here to live with his son. Besides his son here, Mr. Beard is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Annie Eagle, of Churchville, Va., and Miss Mary Beard, of Fairfield, Va.

Funeral services will be conducted Tuesday morning at New Providence church in Rockbridge County.

Typographical Union Meets in Uniontown

Uniontown, Pa., April 15 (Spl.).—The thirty-eighth semiannual tri-State conference of the International Typographical Union, which embraces parts of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, was held here today, with nearly 300 delegates and visitors in attendance.

West Virginia Fight Looms Over Senate

By William L. Geppert.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 15 (Spl.).—Interest of West Virginia voters and politicians is being centered upon party nominations for United States Senator.

Republican reports are current that Walter S. Hallanan, of Charleston, Republican National committeeman, will endeavor to obtain the nomination over his friend and political godfather, United States Senator H. D. Hatfield, Huntington physician and former Governor.

Hatfield, when Governor, started Hallanan on his political career by appointing him his secretary. Hallanan then being on the editorial staff of a Huntington newspaper. If a compromise fails a serious party split would result in the southern section.

Friends of Thomas C. Townsend, Charleston lawyer and former State tax commissioner, are asking him to resume State Republican leadership and are urging him to seek the senatorial nomination. Townsend is still technical head of the State party, having been the nominee for governor at the last election. He campaigned on the State tax limitation amendment, which was approved by the people.

Ten Democrats Mentioned.

On the Democratic side ten party leaders are being mentioned for the nomination for Senator, although one, former Gov. John J. Cornwell, of Romney, now general counsel for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, has definitely stated that he will not be a candidate.

A formidable figure on the Democratic side is United States Senator M. M. Neeley, of Fairmont, the hold-over Senator, who may be able to dictate the nomination for Senator Hatfield's seat. He has joined forces with former United States Senator William E. Chilton, Charleston newspaper publisher, who some time ago indicated he would be a candidate.

Many believe that this partnership is in line with Neely's plans to give the nomination to some one else, perhaps Representative John Kee, of Bluefield, through an understanding with Chilton. Neely is centering his efforts on the southern section of the State. He fought strenuously to retain Virgil Ross as State manager of the HOLC, in which he was successful even after Washington had announced that Ross would retire. Neely has also enlisted as a supporter Delegate Rush D. Holt, of Weston, leader of the liberal forces in the Legislature.

Taylor in Picture.

Another liberal to be reckoned with in the senatorial race on the Democratic side is J. Alfred Taylor, Fayette editor, candidate for the party nomination for Governor in the last election. Taylor, however, is said to be nurturing an ambition to become Third District representative.

In connection with this congressional race, Mrs. S. W. Price, Fayette County member of the House of Delegates, is understood to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination. She told colleagues she would oppose Representative Andrew Edmiston, Weston publisher.

Others mentioned for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator include Louis A. Johnson, Clarksburg lawyer, immediate past National commander of the American Legion and former member of the House of Delegates; Arthur B. Koontz, Charleston lawyer and party nominee for Governor in 1920; H. B. Davenport, Charleston oil operator; Col. J. Harvey Long, Huntington newspaper publisher; Representative Joe Smith, of Beckley, and Ralph M. Hiner, of Pendleton County, speaker of the House of Delegates.

Several members of the House of Delegates are understood to be grooming candidacies for State Senate seats. Delegate J. P. Beacon, of Huntington, seeks the Democratic nomination to succeed Senator Harvey C. Taylor, of Huntington, in the Fifth District.

Orange County Tax Rate Is Increased

Net Advance of 5 Cents Per $100 Made.

Orange, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—An increase of the general levy for county expenses for the fiscal year, beginning July 1, of from 25 cents to 45 cents on the $100 valuation was fixed by the Orange County board of supervisors when they drew up the budget estimates at their April meeting.

At the same time, 15 cents was stricken from the proposed county levy, the appropriation for schools being reduced from 75 cents to 60 cents on the $100 valuation. That makes a net increase of 5 cents for taxpayers to meet next year.

Though many attending the meeting clamored for a cut in expenditures, the board maintained that with a rate which had allowed a fall in two years from a surplus of $14,000 to a deficit of $10,000 an increase was imperative. Two items, totaling $1,200, were stricken from the proposed expenditures for next year.

Dismal Swamp Liquor Plants Are Destroyed

Norfolk, Va., April 15 (AP).—Three distilling plants, with a total capacity of 1,000 gallons of whisky a day, were destroyed by internal revenue agents working out of Norfolk in the Dismal Swamp section of eastern North Carolina late Friday, according to reports reaching here yesterday.

Family Ties Hit By Depression

Miss Rich Finds Contrasts Which Makes General Verdict Difficult.

Charlottesville, Va., April 15 (AP). An address by Miss Margaret Rich, associate executive secretary of the Family Welfare Association of America, featured the closing session of the conference here of the Virginia Social Science Association last night.

She said that the same adversities which tend to break up one type of home weld another more strongly together. Contrasting results, the speaker observed, made it difficult to genaralize on depression effects on family ties.

Fewer men have deserted their families than might have been expected, she said, but added that the tension on family ties has been increased and that some students of sociology fear that a return of wide-spread prosperity may result in some homes being broken up.

If one type of family has suffered more from the depression than another it is the paternalistic type, wherein the husband and head of the house, formerly dictated to others in the home. As this father has lost his economic position he has also lost his place of respect as family head. The depression has tended to put families on the basis of partnerships, she concluded.

Roanoke Women Wait G. O. P. Rally

Large Delegation to Attend Richmond Meeting.

Roanoke, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—A large delegation of Republican women from Roanoke is planning to attend a conference for women members of the party in Richmond next Wednesday.

Arrangements here are in charge of Mrs. H. Earl Haupt, Roanoke city vice chairman, and Mrs. Felix K. Parker, State vice chairman. Women of the Sixth and Ninth districts are sponsoring the conference.

Mrs. C. O. Gardner, of Montvale, vice chairman of the Sixth district, and Mrs. A. S. Higginbotham, of Tazewell, Ninth district chairman, are expected to attend. Ted Dalton, of Radford, chairman of the Sixth, and Luther Fuller, of Honaker, chairman of the Ninth district, also will attend. Speakers will include H. B. McCormac, of Winchester, Republican State chairman; Fred W. McWane, of Lynchburg, secretary and treasurer of the State committee, and T. X. Parsons, of Roanoke, city chairman.

Roanoke Will Act On Rum Law Soon

Roanoke, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—The city council is expected to act this week on an ordinance to control the sale of liquor in Roanoke. Three proposals are being considered. They follow recommendations of the Virginia League of Municipalities.

One measure imposes the maximum license fee permitted under a State statute for the manufacture, bottling and sale of alcoholic beverages. The other two are based on State criminal statutes dealing with drunken driving of motor vehicles and drunkenness.

Rotarians Told Of CCC Projects

Work Done by 5 Camps in Luray District Outlined.

Luray, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—J. R. Lassiter, of the National Park Service, told the Luray Rotary Club yesterday that members of five CCC camps in this area had cleaned up 3,785 acres of mountain land; had built road and side trails for 43 miles; horse trails of 24 miles; foot trails of 5 miles and erected 7 miles of guard rails along the Skyline Drive.

Mr. Lassiter also said that the campers had been fighting blister rust on more than 1,800 acres of forest land and had been instrumental in having 100,000 acres of land in the Blue Ridge mapped out for the Shenandoah National Park. Mr. Lassiter said the campers at Big Meadows and Skyland CCC camps had cut 500 chestnut posts for the Gettysburg National Military Post and 15,000 rails for the birthplace of George Washington.

Stock Dealers Spend Week in Quiet Waiting

Prices Change Little With Exception of Preferred Share Gains.

New York, April 15 (AP).—This was a week of watchful waiting in the financial markets.

Investment buying of securities expanded, with the demand for bonds running over into preferred stocks. But share prices, on the average, were little changed.

Attention was divided between the trends of Federal legislation and business statistics. The return of President Roosevelt from his fishing trip on Friday was awaited eagerly, in the hope that legislative uncertainties would soon be clarified. Business statistics were rather obscure, with steel and motor production expanding and retail distribution still active, while freight movement and electric power output declined.

Leaders Still Complain.

With the spring season now well under way and the time of the normal peak in industrial production at hand, further governmental efforts to keep recovery in motion were widely expected. Business leaders still complained that continued uncertainty over costs, wages, taxes and regulation was stifling initiative and urged prompt action on the problems facing Congress.

Early announcement in Washington of a plan to spur building construction was anticipated, as an additional recovery factor.

The bond market continued to improve as the huge accumulation of surplus bank and other investment funds sought profitable employment in a period of declining interest rates. Late in the week, the Treasury, evidently encouraged by the response to its offer to convert the billion of called 4¼ per cent fourth Liberties into 3¼ per cent bonds, announced the call of $1,200,000,000 more of the fourth Liberties on October 15, next.

Bonds at New High.

The bond market, as measured by the price index of 60 corporate issues, advanced to a new high since 1931. The index crept steadily higher during the week, finishing at 87.4, which represents percentage of the 1926 average. This registered a gain of 1.1 points from a week ago, and 2.5 points from a fortnight ago, a striking advance for this index.

Aside from some of the preferred issues and specialties, the stock market did little. The price index of 90 representative issues declined slightly every day but Tuesday, but the fair rally on that day resulted in a net gain for the week of .2 of one point, the index finishing at 86.9.

Bar silver fluctuated uncertainly as the silver bloc renewed its drive for legislation in Congress. After touching 46¾ cents an ounce, the high of the year, the metal ended the week at 46⅝. Nonferrous metals generally were firm, with small gains appearing in copper, lead and zinc.

Moody's index of 15 sensitive staples lost a little ground during the week, however, heavily weighed as it is for such staples as wheat and cotton. Wheat futures at Chicago lost 1⅜ to 1¾ cents a bushel, corn about as much. Cotton futures at New York lost 65 to 90 cents a bale.

China Plant to Expand; Will Employ 350 Men

Newell, W. Va., April 15 (AP).—A $300,000 expansion program that will result in employment of 350 men has been announced by Arthur Wells, general manager of the Homer Laughlin China Co.

Work will be started tomorrow morning. Wells said there will be complete remodelization of the No. 5 plant which has been idle five years. The contract has been let to the Allied Engineers Contracting Co. of Columbus, Ohio.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Treasury's Call for $1,200,000,000 of Liberty 4¼s Is Assurance of Sound Money Only if Business and Prices Keep Advancing.

By Ralph West Robey.

If it were not for the record of the past year, there is one conclusion that could be drawn with the greatest certainty from the Treasury's call of $1,200,000,000 of Liberty 4¼s. This is that the call proves that the Administration does not anticipate anything within the next six months to weaken the confidence of investors in United States obligations. Specifically, this would mean that it does not expect any significant modifications in the monetary policy or any noteworthy increase in the spending program of the Government. In view of the record for the last few months, however, such a conclusion can be, at most, only tentative.

To appreciate this it is necessary only to recall what happened last October in connection with the refunding operation. At that time, October 15, the Treasury called $1,875,000,000 of Liberty 4¼s. Because six month's notice must be given in any call of these obligations, this meant that the bonds would mature on April 15 of this year. The Treasury, however, made an offer for an immediate exchange of the old bonds into new obligations. These new bonds bore a rate of interest of 4¼ per cent for the first year and 3¼ thereafter. They were of 12-year maturity and were callable after ten years.

That Operation Also Indicated Stable Money.

That offering, just as truly as the current call, indicated that the Treasury was anticipating no significant changes in the governmental financial picture. Further, the terms were liberal—if anything, somewhat above what the market necessitated. In consequence, the holders of the called bonds immediately began to turn them in to the Treasury for the new obligations. Within two weeks some $800,000,000 worth were so exchanged. The offering gave every indication of being a huge success. Suddenly, however, the whole picture changed.

This change came with the radio speech of President Roosevelt on Sunday evening, October 22. In this he announced a new monetary policy—the policy of having the Government buy newly mined domestic gold at an arbitrary value. A week later the gold-buying was extended to foreign markets.

Immediately virtually all exchanging of the old Liberty 4¼s stopped. Here was something that few, if any, people could understand beyond knowing that it meant our monetary system was on a constantly varying basis and that it was being used, in the words of the President, as an "effective means" for raising the price level.

In such circumstances they no longer were interested in taking 12-10 year bonds in exchange for obligations that they could convert into actual cash at par within less than six months. Only a few days later the Treasury withdrew its refunding offer and the operation came to an end—one of the worst failures in history.

Break of Prices Was Cause of the Change.

The immediate cause for that change of policy on the part of the Government was simple and obvious. It was that the prices for agricultural products were breaking badly with the result that there was a growing wave of resentment against the recovery program and the Administration. It was a choice between stopping this criticism and going ahead with the refunding operation. The decision was made in favor of stopping the opposition.

Whether the Administration, if it were faced with a similar choice within the next six months, would make the same decision is an open question. I am inclined to think it would. In consequence it does not seem wise to me to take the current call by the Treasury as an assurance that there will not be further changes in our monetary policies between now and next October. It may be that at the moment the Treasury and the Administration do not anticipate any change, but if business slumps or agricultural prices start a rapid decline, the whole picture may be changed just as suddenly as it was in October last year.

Cut in Federal Relief Noted as Trade Revives

Expenditures Drop Nearly 50 Per Cent After Reaching Peak.

(United Press.)

A sharp decline in Federal relief expenditures with expansion of business and termination of the CWA program was shown by Treasury Department figures yesterday.

Emergency expenditures of the Government have dropped nearly 50 per cent after reaching the depression peak of $808,000,000 during January.

Because of lower relief needs and slower Government relief spending emergency expenditures total just half the amount provided in the budget.

For the present fiscal year the Administration estimated emergency needs at $7,523,486,700. For the first nine months of the current fiscal year to March 31, 1933, emergency expenditures amounted to only $2,900,000,000. They are currently running slightly above this rate but at about half that of January.

Expenditures by Months.

July, 1933	$75,352,742
August	136,650,776
September	81,124,632
October	104,184,254
November	293,514,400
December	462,998,519
January, 1934	808,007,730
February	447,323,562
March	449,808,670
April (11 days)	209,763,690

The less than anticipated Government aid for business and relief was believed to indicate a greater than expected expansion in business.

Of the various Government departments the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is believed to have shown greatest reduction in emergency expenditures. This unit, Jesse H. Jones, chairman, estimated will spend $500,000,000 less this fiscal year than provided for in the budget.

Gains in Business.

Important business indices showed further gains in business activity last week. Department store sales in March showed the greatest climb since the depression, registering a gain of 44 per cent over last year.

The gain was believed to reflect the Nation's growing pay rolls and employment and marked a rapid flow of goods into the hands of consumers. Another important consumer buying index, automobile production, week before last reached another new high when 89,722 units were turned out.

Steel Ingot Production Rises Sharply

Capacity Climbs 4.1 Points; Copper Price Gains as Lead Advances.

New York, April 15 (AP).—A sharp upturn in steel ingot production this week carried the estimated rate up 4.1 points to 47.4 per cent of capacity, and trade predictions were for further improvement.

Contracts placed prior to the price advances were well in excess of first quarter commitments and were said to insure sustained operations during the second quarter, barring further automobile labor difficulties. Active demand for pig iron was also reported prior to the effective date of price rises in this division.

All nonferrous metals were firm with the exception of tin. In that metal a decline of more than 1 cent per pound for the week reflected the action of the London market and foreign exchange as well as uncertainty over possible production quota changes by the international tin committee.

While some buying was uncovered on the first moderate decline, further reactions made consumers cautious and demand tapered off.

An additional ¼ cent per pound advance in copper reflected trade expectations that the copper code under the NRA would soon be signed. Recent active buying was said to have supplied consumers' needs for several months forward and quieter conditions prevailed later in the week.

Trade estimates indicated a reduction of 25,500 tons in world stocks of copper during March. Predictions for further increases in automobile production and reports of large orders for electrical equipment were regarded as pointing to larger outlets for copper.

An advance of $5 per ton in the New York price for lead, the first price change in 1934, resulted from active buying from practically all consuming branches for prompt and forward needs. After having apparently filled their requirements, demand tapered off, but smelters, comfortably supplied with orders, held firm.

The advance in zinc, which got under way in the previous week, was extended further, making a gain of $2 per ton from the recent low. Buying during the week, however, was of small proportions, but contracts placed at the first indications of firmness were said to call for delivery of good quantities into July.

Antimony was quiet following the recent advance. With European buying orders filled, the domestic demand was small, but firmness of Chinese quotations accounted for a firm undertone.

Culbertson on Bridge

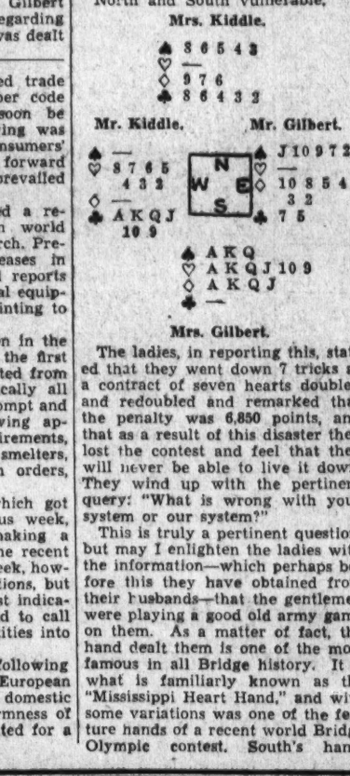
The Flaw in the System.

It's a very fine thing when wives admire the play of their husbands at the Bridge table, and it is an equally fine thing when husbands feel so highly about the play of their wives that they are willing to make up a foursome and play against them. But here, for the honor of my sex, I think the gentlemen should leave the dealing to nature and not direct it along bold and beaten paths.

The reason for these remarks is a letter I received the other day from Mrs. Warren K. Gilbert and Mrs. Fred E. Kiddle regarding a remarkable hand which was dealt by Mr. Gilbert and which resulted in a most amazing set for the ladies. In submitting the hand below Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Kiddle explain to me that they had just completed a course of Contract Bridge lessons under a teacher who holds one of my certificates and they felt that at least they knew when a two-bid was a two-bid. They were playing a number of hands against their husbands, the ladies having the North and South seats and the gentlemen the East and West ones. Mr. Gilbert distributed the cards around the table in the following remarkable manner:

East, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

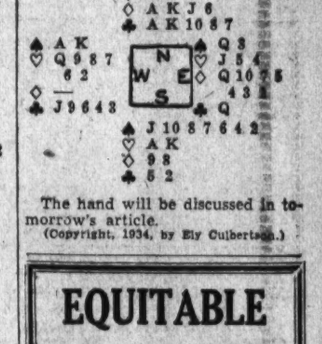


The ladies, in reporting this, stated that they went down 7 tricks at a contract of seven hearts doubled and redoubled and remarked that the penalty was 6,850 points, and that as a result of this disaster they lost the contest and feel that they will never be able to live it down. They wind up with the pertinent query: "What is wrong with your system or our system?"

This is truly a pertinent question, but may I enlighten the ladies with the information—which perhaps before this they have obtained from their husbands—that the gentlemen were playing a good old army game on them. As a matter of fact, the hand dealt them is one of the most famous in all Bridge history. It is what is familiarly known as the "Mississippi Heart Hand," and with some variations was one of the feature hands of a recent world Bridge Olympic contest. South's hand, seemingly impregnable, must go to disaster on the rocks of distribution. I do not marvel at all that Mrs. Gilbert, if she was unfamiliar with the hand, thought it was the realization of all her dreams so far as Bridge was concerned and that she gladly redoubled when West doubled. I am sorry, however—deeply sorry—that I must ask Messrs. Gilbert and Kiddle to return their ill-gotten spoils. The palming of the deck and the setting up of the hand were magnificent, but, after all, a joke can go too far, and a joke that goes too far is one that makes two Bridge-loving ladies feel that they can never live down a disaster.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

"It paid to buy the Gas Refrigerator . . . it saves so much"...

Owners of the gas refrigerator have a very real enthusiasm for their refrigerators. For the gas refrigerator—Electrolux—saves them more each day than they had ever dreamed!

The gas refrigerator costs no more than other well made modern refrigerators. It costs less to operate. This item alone saves more than enough in a very short time to pay for its original cost. Foods keep fresh longer and less is wasted. Leftovers become money-savers on the menu. Quantity purchases of food at quantity prices become practical.

Through its complete lack of moving parts (only a tiny gas flame is used to give the constant, steady cold necessary), you can visualize another great saving in longer life and freedom from costly repairs. Isn't this enough to warrant calling DIstrict 8500 and learning more about the gas refrigerator?

SEE THE Gas Refrigerator BEFORE YOU BUY

Quick Facts about the New 1934 Air-Cooled GAS REFRIGERATOR

1. LOWEST OPERATING COST—The gas refrigerator operates for less than any other automatic refrigerator.
2. PERMANENT SILENCE—The gas refrigerator has nothing to vibrate or become noisy with age.
3. NO MACHINERY—A tiny gas flame takes the place of all complicated machinery. No moving parts.
4. FREEDOM FROM COSTLY REPAIRS—Without machinery the gas refrigerator has little to wear or need repairing.
5. EVERY WORTHWHILE CONVENIENCE—These include well known advantages and several new and exciting exclusive features.
6. GAS COMPANY SERVICE—Prompt, efficient service at all times (but rarely ever needed) by your Gas Company.

This Afternoon.

The Star-Spangled Banner will be played. The flag itself will curl to the top of a pole at Griffith Stadium. President Roosevelt, wreathed in smiles, will toss out the first ball. Then, with everybody settled in his seat munching peanuts, the cry of "Play Ball!" will set off the annual spring frenzy in earnest.

Washington alone may have its cherry blossom spectacle, New England may boast its famous marathon, New Orleans may invite all and sundry to its mardi gras, but the whole Nation has its baseball. From now on, nothing will matter much to the great American public so long as Babe Ruth's legs hold out and Carl Hubbell gets over his spring wildness.

The season, which starts here today, bursts gloriously throughout the rest of the country tomorrow and from New York to Cincinnati, from Boston to Chicago, National and American League rooters will begin stuffing their heads with batting averages and predicting the unpredictable. Pennant winners are always named by enthusiasts before the grass around the diamonds is really green.

Baseball, like other industries, has suffered the past few years. But, unlike others, it has not yet asked Government aid. It ought this year to stage a big comeback. Baseball is the oldest and the greatest of our games. If Joseph Edward Cronin and Bucky Harris and Connie Mack and others can give us good baseball from now until September, one thing is certain: the revolution won't start until autumn! Everybody will be at the ball parks, too busy for any such minor matters as storming the gates of Washington and placing a cordon in the White House.

So, Play Ball!

Another Veto?

It is intimated at the White House that the President may veto the tax bill. He is extremely dissatisfied with the provision imposing a tax on coconut oil in direct contravention of the promises made to the Philippine Islands in the Tydings-McDuffie act. Several other provisions of the bill appear to be out of harmony with the Administration's program and sound taxing policy.

Unless the Senate is willing to reverse its vote of 59 to 17 on the coconut oil tax, a veto may be the only means of preserving the good faith of the American Government in its dealings with the Philippines. Both houses have approved a levy on this insular product. Hence the rules will not permit its elimination from the bill in conference. Some effort is being made to secure reconsideration by the Senate before the measure goes to conference. But that body is not in the habit of reversing decisions made by such an overwhelming affirmative vote.

President Roosevelt is doubtless anxious to have Congress adjourn as soon as possible. Yet the issue raised in the coconut oil tax is of such vital importance that a veto may be expected unless some way is found to expunge that tax from the bill. In effect the United States has made a contract with the Philippines. Enactment of the latest independence measure was a direct result of an agreement between the President and Filipino leaders. If the Administration should fail to keep its pledge, accusations of trickery and bad faith would probably cloud our relations to the insular government for many years.

The coconut oil levy appears to be the most flagrant blunder incorporated in the tax bill. Yet in a way it illustrates the hodgepodge character of the entire measure. It might be well for the President to wipe the slate clean with a veto and give Congress an opportunity to draft a bill designed only to produce revenue.

State Versus Lobby.

Those who look for morals may find an interesting one in the efforts of the French government to secure essential budgetary economies.

Political difficulties in France in recent months have been many—so many, indeed, that the usual dire predictions of national eclipse have been frequently made since airing of the Stavisky scandal. This, after all, was merely a manifestation of the impotence of the constituted national authority to purge itself and to wield power disinterestedly for the national welfare.

One of the major manifestations of impotence was that several ministries fell because of inability to solve the fundamental problems of making shrinking revenues meet mounting expenditures. The government was in such a strait-jacket that any attempt to adjust its civil servants' salaries and veterans' benefits to its capacity to pay meant overthrow by the chamber. The people, in other words, had lost their authority to curb the powerful lobbies conducted by interested groups.

By repeatedly threatening to resign, Premier Doumergue has now finally secured from the veterans an agreement to reduction in their pensions. The fact that the prime minister had to negotiate with the groups affected to secure this end is called by one Paris paper the exemplification of impotence on the part of the state.

If reduction of pensions by agreement is a sign of the surrender of government to an unscrupulous lobby, what shall be said of the complete capitulation to similar groups, of which our Congress has recently been guilty?

Jurisdictional Strikes.

An interesting study of recent labor disputes might be made without going outside of Washington. On several occasions work on the Labor-Interstate Commerce Commission buildings has been delayed by strikes. Last week a group of plasterers walked out. Protracted negotiations may be necessary before they return, since they have rejected the compromise suggested by the Building Trades Council. It is rather ironical that work on the structure designed to house the Labor Department should thus be held up by controversies within the ranks of labor.

Strikes are not always a result of differences between capital and labor. A few weeks ago work on the Labor-ICC buildings was halted because of a disagreement between the plasterers and carpenters. The most recent strike was ordered by the plasterers' union when marble setters were assigned a job of setting stone. These disputes which arise between two labor groups demanding jurisdiction over the same piece of work are no less a problem than controversies over wage rates.

Inasmuch as the settlement proposed by the local Building Trades Council has been rejected, solution of this latest jurisdictional controversy devolves upon the two local unions and the internationals with which they are affiliated. Unless the disputants iron out their own differences or agree in advance to abide by the decision of some arbiter there is no authority in the entire labor organization that can terminate the strike.

Jurisdictional disputes of this sort are one of the most serious dilemmas confronting organized labor. The American Federation of Labor has tried to mitigate the problem by voluntary inter-union agreements, amalgamations and departmental alliances. But these methods have not been generally effective. Controversies between rival organizations continue to disrupt construction projects and other enterprises. It does not appear that the A. F. of L. has control of labor even within its own ranks.

The experience of the Government right here in Washington may be considered as a warning against conferring unreasonable powers upon the A. F. of L. while its machinery for dealing with disputes among its own affiliates is so inadequate.

Prices And Consumers.

The task of representing the interests of consumers is one to test the endurance and the temper of the best trained minds. Last summer Prof. Ogburn resigned from the Consumers Advisory Board, protesting that the NRA was paving the way for monopolies and price-fixing to the detriment of consumers. His resignation has now been followed by that of Dr. Keezer who recently prepared a report issued by the Consumers Advisory Board criticizing the price-fixing tendencies of the NRA codes. Although Dr Keezer is withdrawing to become president of Reed College, it is reported that he has contemplated resigning on several occasions because of disagreement with Administration policies.

As a rule, the interests of individuals as producers and distributors seem to them to be much more important than their vaguely defined rights as consumers. Hence the work of formulating protective policies for a great inchoate body of consumers is one of extreme difficulty. Under present conditions the situation is complicated by the fact that certain New Deal policies completely ignore the consumer's point of view. The Administration is trying to raise prices in many instances, and it is not easy to determine in all cases where the line of demarcation between reasonable advances and profiteering should be drawn.

Consumers' organizations may do useful work to prevent deterioration of standards, to improve the quality of goods sold, and to protect buyers against misrepresentation. But it is obvious that when economic experts attempt to go farther and develop price policies which, in their opinion are essential for consumer protection, they will encounter extensive opposition. All those organized groups and interests that represent consumers in their capacity of workers, maufacturers and tradesmen have to be considered. The result is necessarily a compromise of conflicting interests, with the consumer playing a subordinate role in the apportionment of favors.

Neglected Books.

Malcolm Cowley has started a campaign in The New Republic to attract public attention to neglected books. He believes that there are many valuable and fairly recent volumes that have been overlooked by the public. It is doubtful if his campaign will succeed, for, as M. Lincoln Schuster recently pointed out, the American public, despite its alleged interest in higher education, does not read books. Even the sales figures of best sellers are small in comparison with the number of literates in this country. People who should be potential book readers turn instead to the bridge table for diversion.

Mr. Cowley's own list of unread books, all published within a year or two, is interesting. The titles will probably not be familiar to many, although one was turned into a talking picture and had some success. He thinks Nathaniel West's "Miss Lonely Hearts," Hart Crane's "Collected Poems," and Katherine Anne Porter's "Flowering Judas" ought to be in everybody's library.

Why haven't these books been financial successes? "It may not be the fault of the publisher, the critic, the bookseller," says Mr. Cowley, "it may not be anybody's fault except that of the general system by which too many books are distributed with an enormous lot of ballyhoo to not enough readers." That is the sensible answer. But in this movie-going, bridge-playing age, the wonder is not that these books have sold poorly but that even the best sellers have done so well.

Assessing The Costs.

Confronted by complaints of exorbitant code assessments and charges that payments have been evaded, the Government has taken steps to supervise the collection of fees to cover the expenses of code administration. Failure to make such contributions is regarded as a violation of the code which may entail loss of benefits as well as possible suits against delinquents. "Racketeering" and wasteful dissipation of funds will be discouraged by the necessity of submitting itemized budgets to Gen. Johnson, who is also empowered to approve the rates of assessment.

It is extremely important to safeguard industries against the abuses that frequently arise within trade associations. Effective self-regulation of industry has been hampered in the past by the lack of adequate machinery. Long before the NRA was conceived numerous trades and industries had built up elaborate and expensive central organizations which in some cases cost much more than they were worth. Outlays for experts and payment of large fees to lawyers making a profession of advising trade associations often entailed a heavy tax upon the members of such groups. In short the "racketeering" of which complaint is now heard is by no means a new development; it has simply been brought into the open under the new comprehensive system of organization.

At first glance, Government intervention to protect industry against overcharges and outright dishonesty may be regarded as a blow to the principle of industrial self-regulation. However, this particular form of intervention is designed to strengthen, not to undermine, the authority of the code representatives by eliminating subversive elements which threaten the structure from within.

The worst enemies of trade associations are those plausible individuals who use their persuasive powers to induce untrained small business men to pay them large fees and salaries for doing work that they are not competent to perform. With the Government authorities scrutinizing outlays, endeavoring to prevent overcharges, and seeing that the costs are equitably distributed, industry may go forward much more confidently than it could if financing activities were entirely unregulated.

Good Sense Is Behind It.

Representative Dies wants to know "what's behind this silver opposition." Speaker Rainey suspects a plot is being engineered by a "gold bloc" to head off legislation and says it is "time to investigate the investigators."

There is a better way of discovering the facts about the silver opposition than probing into the activities of lobbies. That is to consider the logical arguments against proposals to bestow huge subsidies upon silver producers and speculators at home and abroad. The silver-buying plans of Representatives Dies, Fiesinger and others are being opposed simply because well-informed legislators know they would bring disaster upon the country. Efforts to force large amounts of paper into circulation, backed by silver valued at fictitiously high prices would produce an uncontrollable inflation. This would undermine confidence and destroy the public credit almost as surely as the issuance of fiat money having no metallic backing.

Not a single argument in favor of the silver bills stands up in face of the facts. The notion that the purchasing power of Eastern nations would be revived by remonetization of silver and our export trade miraculously stimulated thereby, is nonsense on its face. Chinese objections that higher silver prices would unfavorably affect their domestic business—hence their foreign trade—shatter that illusion.

It is impossible to maintain that this country needs more money, given its vast, unutilized credit resources. More purchasing power and greater velocity of circulation of money and credit are needed. To be beneficial, however, buying must be based upon improved business demands and increased production. Subsidies to a special group of silver producers, disbursed by pushing vast quantities of silver-backed certificates into circulation, will never stimulate a lasting business revival. They could and would destroy the confidence without which business can not prosper.

The important question is not what is behind the opposition, but what is behind the powerful movement to give temporary advantages to silver interests at the expense of the security of the country as a whole.

Fishermen's Plight.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The condition of the fishermen who must make their living out of the river is indeed sad. The season which usually starts in shad fishing anywhere from March 15 to April 1 has not materialized and few shad or herring have been caught up to the present time.

When you realize that thousands of men, women and children are dependent upon the Potomac and have spent their all in getting an outfit in preparation for the season, you will know what it means. According to rules and regulations laid down by the commissions representing Maryland and Virginia, these fish can not be caught and marketed after June 1, nor can they even salt them for winter food under penalty of the law. This joint commission has been appealed to, to extend the season on account of the late beginning, but have been adamant in their refusal to hear the petitioners.

As far as the Potomac River is concerned, every available fishing ground has been bought up by rich clubs and to be caught fishing at these points is little less than murder. The anglers use these grounds about once a month in warm weather, but the fellow who needs the fish either for sustenance or sale is not allowed to even land on the shore. I write this in the hope that some way somehow, some of those in authority will see it in your widely circulated paper and come to the rescue of the weak against the mighty to stem the tide of suffering and distress which seems inevitable.

G. H. HAYDEN.

Hymn of Praise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you for your column, "The Post Impressionist," of April 12, telling about the children's riot in Boston.

I am not one of those who love animals above their fellowman, but where love and loyalty even to a dog, are so true and persistent, I, for one, feel like singing a hymn of praise. If the press could give us more true stories of this kind told in just this way, our children would be expressing more generally qualities which are sorely needed in this world today.

DOROTHY HAGEDORN.

Kindness to Dumb Animals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Annual Humane Sunday and Be Kind to Animals Anniversary Week, April 15 to 21, are with us once more. I am asking that the observance this year be marked by the beginning of concerted and forceful Christian efforts against two evils in our midst which can and must be stopped—desertion of unwanted animals and the increase of trained animal shows.

There is positively no excuse for the growing crime of dropping unwanted cats and dogs from speeding autos along country highways and hedges, and deserting them at summer resorts at the end of the season. The Animal Relief and Humane Education League and the Animal Rescue League exist to take in and mercifully dispose of your unwanted animals. Wilful desertion of an animal is a punishable offense against the anti-cruelty laws, so do not hesitate to report any person known to be guilty, and when possible get auto tag numbers of cars from which animals are dropped.

Secondly, please extend the sentiments of Be Kind to Animals Anniversary into the circus season, which soon follows. Be brave enough to inform yourselves of the real methods of training animals for circuses and the theater. Read Jack London's "Michael, Brother of Jerry," which describes the training of animals, and about which he says, "In trained animal acts cruelty has reached its perfect flower." Realize that often instead of the proverbial "kindness" of the trainers, they employ starvation and the cruel punishment of iron bars, whips, electric currents and pistol shots to force their miserable victims into their unnatural, silly tricks. Take your stand in behalf of these victims of commercialized cruelty that have no voice to plead their cause.

The people of Washington have been wonderful this winter in their faithfulness in feeding the birds and many alley waifs during the continuous snowstorms, and this organization thanks them for their kindness. Now will they extend that kindness to the spring season and defend the man-made victims of the brutalities mentioned above?

VIRGINIA W. SARGENT,
President,
Animal Relief and Humane Education League.
Washington, April 13.

One for the Major.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post-Impressionist earns, again, the public's gratitude when he asks that public to help him answer "crushingly" the Major's attack on the modern public school. For the Major, as you doubtless already suspect, is one-sided and not social-minded!

It would give me the greatest satisfaction to put in writing my own experiences with reference to education and noneducation. There are thousands of case histories I could refer to in support of the necessity of concentrating on education of muscle and mind in children rather than building beautiful jails.

(Mrs.) LELIA KESTLER.
Washington, April 13.

Illogical But Emphatic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it impossible to check, at least by some few thousands, the tourist torrent that pours, I am told annually, over this beautiful city of ours, attracted by the Cherry Blossom Festival?

Perhaps a newcomer, or re-newcomer, is more sensitive, sees—and, oh, feels—vibrations to which the long-time resident is less amenable. I have no desire to be captious. I trust that I love my fellowman as well as most. But having lately chosen Washington as my place of abode, I do find this alien inrush a trifle trying.

ULYSSES W. LYTTLEMORE.

For International Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Women are tired of raising sons to be cannon fodder and soldiers to be slaughtered in war and, therefore, women, more even than men, are advocates of international peace and opposed to war. However, if international peace and the brotherhood of man are to become a reality and not be a mere Utopian dream, ideals of peace must be inculcated in children during the formative period of their lives.

Washington, April 13 D. A. D.

Will Rogers for President!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the "road to hell is paved with good intentions" and we're "on our way" from "Wirt to Wirt," why not have the Republicans nominate Will Rogers for President? He might develop in us a sense of the ridiculous.

HUMORIST.

A Question.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Variety is the spice of life." Now that collectivism and class consciousness are the order of the day, and all that we have considered heretofore worthwhile is made a subject of ridicule, there comes to mind a question to which I wish to call the attention of your readers.

When so-called rugged individualism has been stifled, individual achievement made impossible, personal effort rendered futile, and individual responsibility has come to an end, when hope of advancement is dead, and there is nothing to look forward to but life on the stale, dead level of uniformity, will the civilized nations retain their civilization and remain reasoning human beings, or will their arrested development cause them to sink mentally to the condition of the brutes?

This is a question which I think worthy of the profound consideration of those of us still capable of sane thought.

Fredericksburg, April 13.

Ask the Man in the Street.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why not take a straw vote of the rank and file, or the man in the street, so to speak, if he approves the stock exchange bill, the bank deposit insurance bill, ship subsidies, air-mail subsidies, &c., to make a favored few rich at the expense of the American voter? See if he favors amendment to the income tax laws to prevent the favored few from loading their just responsibility to the Government?

N. BURR BELL.
Rockville, Md., April 13.

Unchanging English.

An English journalist has suggested a "scientific alphabet" containing probably a few more letters or letter-combinations than the present one which would aid in the process of simplifying English spelling, possibly serving to make it more consistent. The Chicago Tribune recently adopted a simplified form of spelling a score or more of words, but has not attempted to adopt a radical form for all words, like the Literary Digest and a few other publications. One of the spelling reformers, Dr. Dewitt C. Croissant, of Georgetown University, has condemned the vagaries of "English as she is wrote" as "unhistorical, unscientific, unscholarly, unnatural, unreasonable, and uneconomical." If he could have thought up any other uncomplimentary adjectives, doubtless he would have used them.

Every foreigner who tries to learn our language almost despairs when he finds that although the plural of mouse is mice, the plural of house is not hice, and though the plural of goose is geese the plural of moose is not meese. "Beauty" rhymes with "duty," but "beau" rhymes with "go" and also "dough." Strangely enough, however, "plough," "dough," "rough" and "through" each have a different pronunciation, though with identical endings. What rule makes "shoe" and "foe," "break" and "freak," "grow" and "brow," "paid" and "said," "hearth" and "dearth" and such like words take different pronounciations? On the other hand, why are words like 'berry" and "bury," "two" and "too," "hart" and "heart," spelled differently but pronounced alike?

The answer is that English is a "melting pot" language. It grew from Greek and Latin, Germanic, Scandinavian, Briton, and later from French, Spanish, East Indian and American Indian roots, retaining the original forms of many of each. Not so with the Teutonic, Scandinavian and Latin languages, with their set forms. Obviously, the job of making over the English language is almost impossible.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

The Post Impressionist

Ex-Kings' Exchequers.

Postoffice, Monday.

Citizens of a republic are interested in reigning monarchs, but perhaps more so in pretenders. Our statement of the former Kaiser's money affairs has brought inquiries about the financial status of other regal exiles. Are they, like the Hohenzollern, in less straitened circumstances than a sympathetic world supposes?

The number of European monarchs with a job is only 11. The number of European monarchs unemployed is staggering. No business has suffered so much as theirs. We couldn't confine their accounts to a column. But we can cite a few examples. Information, as the prospectuses used to say, is believed to be accurate but not guaranteed.

• • • •

The French royal pretender ought to come first because he is, as to blood, so much more royal than many. If the Fleur de Lys fades, it is not because the stock has been crossed with commoners. This Comte de Paris, son of first cousins, unites the Orleans and Bourbon families.

In the old cathedral at Palermo a couple of years ago, the Comte married a more distant cousin, the really pretty, not pretty-by-courtesy, Princess Isabelle, of Orleans-Braganza, and, for expense, the wedding was almost Chicagoan. After all, this poor pretender owns enormous and well-paying properties in Belgium and Sicily, not to mention more in France itself, which the Republic doesn't grudge him.

• • • •

Nor is poverty riding close behind the narrow back of Alfonso, late of Spain. His present fortune—well invested, for he was a better business man than monarch—falls only a half million short of 10 millions, and his British wife, Queen Victoria's granddaughter and namesake, was said to have brought her full $10,000,000 worth of jewels with her when she left her adopted country.

• • • •

She didn't however, bring them quite so conspicuously as Manuel of Portugal, in 1911, exported his belongings. When his followers tried to hurry him aboard a boat from revolutionary Lisbon, he paused on the pier:

"Wait till I've counted my trunks," said he.

He took 58. Then he sent in a claim for 400 cases of historic wines left behind. The new Portuguese republic allowed it and shipped them to his country-gentleman place near Twickenham-on-Thames. Manuel's fortune was then reckoned at $2,500,000, and each new government in Portugal renewed his $8,000 pension.

• • • •

That is just one-fifth of the income Rumanian King Carol is said to pay his divorced wife, the lovely Queen Helen who gives more than a tithe of it to charity. It is far, far less than the former Czar of Bulgaria is said to draw from those sound investments he quietly made abroad when things began to look dark at home. Among his walled gardens near Coburg, the white-bearded, hawk-nosed Ferdinand lives comfortably, if with ostentatious simplicity, making a scrupulous pilgrimage to the Bayreuth Wagner festival each summer, while his son, Boris reigns at Sofia on a beggarly $35,000 a year.

• • • •

On the other hand, there are throne claimants in merely middling circumstances:

George of Greece is happy in England with a fortune believed to be very little over $125,000. He refuses to buy a house because he is sure the day of a royal return to Athens advances. He cares nothing for social life, keeps in his old athletic form and plays a good deal of contract—at nothing per point—with that other George who is King of England.

• • • •

And there is often to be seen on the streets of Munich a tall gentleman with gray moustaches who might say that he, too, has enough for a king in exile, but who is, so to speak, in exile at home. Here he can afford to pursue his antiquarian hobbies, here he and his children are the continuous guests of his aunt, the Princess Arnulf, at Berchtesgarten Castle.

If you go to any large municipal celebration in Munich you will probably observe that he is given precedence over the republican authorities. Ask one of these who he is, and the answer will be "Herr Wittelsbach." Ask the average Bavarian peasant, and he will tell you, "King Rupprecht."

• • • •

This Column has previously spoken at some length about the unquestionable poverty of the Hapsburg claimant, Otto. If you pass by the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia, who has a wealthy wife—if you omit some other Romanoffs who are about in penury—you will have to name non-European former monarchs in compiling a compelling list of really poor ones. And even then there is always someone to "look after" them.

Abdul-Medjid, the latest Sultan of Turkey, complained when he first left there that his whole capital was $25,000—and going fast. But he was soon doing himself rather well on the Riviera and in Switzerland; on an allowance from the Maharajah of Taterabad—some said it came to $18,000 per annum. When he had no cash for his Roman hotel bill, stout Amanuliah, once King of Afghanistan, carried to a jeweler a big camera case full of the crown jewels—and was informed that they were of too poor quality for sale. Another and more fortunate royal somebody was soon said to be providing for Amanullah.

• • • •

In society not royal, we know that poor folk are the most charitable to the born-poor. Perhaps the rich include in their donations, charity for the former rich. So, it appears, do kings-that-are take care of kings-that-were. It is only the middle class that looks badly after its own.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

EVENTS seem to have toppled over one another recently to bring discredit upon the proletarian rule. Coincident with the party at the Russian Embassy—or was it before—a group of young Russian brain trusters, deputy administrators I suppose, came down from Georgia to Moscow for some business with the home office. Their business transacted they went on a bender and raised so much cain that the OGPU had to round them up and send them home.

Of course, this is no different from what we had right here in America under the capitalistic form of government. Under our capitalistic society it was the wont of the governors and sub-governors of the provinces and our industrial and business consuls and pro-consuls to come to the city and let themselves go. The only difference is that we called them visiting firemen. It is not enough of a difference to warrant our overthrow of the capitalistic system, though, and the substitution of proletarianism.

BARGERON.

* * * * *

The most serious blow to proletarian rule, however, came, in my opinion, with the parade of members of Congress for Mr. Roosevelt Friday. There was in that demonstration a total denial of equality which is the promise of proletarianism.

Now just what did we see? There in the middle of the street were members of the House stepping jauntily behind a brass band, one for all and all for one—an example of proletarian unity that would warm the lower order's hearts—stepping along twirling their canes and with their minstrel striped trousers and frock coats.

But on the sidewalk, leisurely stepped two others of the proletariat government, Senators LaFollette and Nye. Why were they not in the parade?

* * * * *

Those of us who are in a receptive mood for proletarian rule can't escape such rank inconsistencies as this. When we see such as this doubt arises whether the proletarian teachers will practice what they preach.

Now I don't know that there has always existed a great difference between the House and the Senate, that the former was supposed to spring from the mob and to keep close to them after springing away, while the senators were supposed to be statesmen with more responsibility and a consequent added dignity.

Under the old order I would not expect Senators LaFollette and Nye to march in the street. That would admittedly have been the way for the members of the House and the sidewalk would have been the place for the Senators. But I can't accept this inequality under proletarian rule.

* * * * *

You may argue until you are blue in the face but the incident proves to me that beneath the proletarian exterior of these two Senators are capitalistic hearts. I'd be willing to bet my last penny that if they come to be deputy administrators under the new Government, they will, despite their proletarian pretensions, insist upon private elevators.

The very idea of two sockers of the rich not marching in the parade with their comrades but instead, walking exclusively on the sidewalk! Hah, if this isn't a travesty upon their professed philosophy, I'll eat my hat. Wait until the word of it gets back to their constituents.

* * * * *

I understand, of course, that there must be distinctions and rank even under proletarian rule; that, in fact, we would have an aristocracy. But the definite promise is that it would be an aristocracy of minds. And this aristocracy would have no advantages or privileges over the rest of us, as I understand it. Their additional compensation would come from the satisfaction of having well served their fellow men.

On the matter of parades, the proletarian promise is very definite that we all march in the street. There should be no distinctions, not even on the basis of mind. Because none of us are thinking then.

France to Seek Solidarity in Little Entente

Nazis Wooing Poland, Slavs, Upset Plans of Republic.

Paris, April 15 (AP).—Plans to strengthen the French political alliances and prevent Nazi Germany from wooing away Poland and the Little Entente have been completed by Louis Barthou, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs.

He will present them to the cabinet Tuesday prior to his departure for Poland equipped with the Quai d'Orsay's diplomatic tool kit, with which he hopes to remove signs of discontent within the once happy family.

Franco-Polish relations entered a new phase when the Poles took the unexpected step of signing a ten-year friendship treaty with the Nazis.

They appealed to the French to follow their example and accept Hitler's proposal of a nonaggression pact.

Officially, the French say they are happy over the newly found feeling between Germany and Poland.

But there are many who fear that the Poles are being duped and that the treaty merely enables the Germans to gain time for an ultimate thrust at Poland which, according to the Franco-Polish treaty, would compel France to send her army to aid Poland. France, sunk in internal strife, does not want trouble.

The Czechs remain most faithful of all allies, Paris belives. Germany, however, is said in the Quay d'Orsay to be working hard to win over Yugoslavia. The latter however officials say, always has liked Germany and hated Italy and Austria.

The Once Over

Brotherly Love Won't Take the Place of a Beefsteak

By Robert Quillen

Christianity has not failed, but Christians have.

In this generation they have faced the two greatest tests in the history of Christiandom, and they have failed miserably and dreadfully.

It was the Christian nations that made the World War. Christian brothers killed one another with bayonets and trench knives. Christian leaders asked their God to help in the butchery. Heathen nations had small part in it.

These last four years have brought a test even more severe, and again Christians have failed. It was their greatest opportunity to prove the worth of Christianity.

The church of Christ is Christ's house, is it not? If He were here, would He say to the people: "You are cold and ragged and miserable. Go freeze in some dark doorway or suffer in some unheated hovel not fit for cattle. This house of mine is snug and warm, but it must be kept clean for those who worship Me on Sunday."

If Christianity means anything, it means following the example of Christ.

If Christ were here, would He possess many suits of clothes and overcoats while men in the street suffered for want of clothing?

You know He would not. He went about doing good. He didn't love things more than men.

There are more than 54,000,000 professing Christians in America. Would anybody suffer if these loved their neighbors as they love themselves?

There are many rich men among these 54,000,000—and millions of prosperous ones. We aren't "all in the same boat." We aren't all dependent on heartless "relief" for our daily ration of bread.

The poor and needy should turn to the church as naturally as a child turns to its mother.

And if the church would greet them as Christ would, how quickly and completely a suffering world could be won to such Christianity.

Olds and Scott Gird for Clash On Reo Control

Friends for 30 Years to Face Showdown on Next Tuesday.

Lansing, April 15 (AP).—The automotive world will turn its attention to this industrial city Tuesday when two friends of 30 years standing will come to a showdown on the control of one of the Nation's oldest automobile plants.

A battle of proxies will be climaxed at that time when stockholders of the Reo Motor Car Co. gather here to determine whether Ransom E. Olds, one of the pioneers of the automotive industry, or Richard H. Scott, another leader in the list of automobile executives, will control the company.

Each side today was confident of victory. From Old's camp came a statement expressing "extreme confidence" and denying claims of an independent stockholders committee. Scott remained publicly silent, but the committee which he supports went into the final stages of the campaign claiming it will emerge the victor.

A last-minute development in the campaign disclosed that Olds has been steadily buying up Reo stock. A "management committee" denied a statement by the independent stockholders committee that Olds' holdings in Reo are limited to 600 shares.

"Mr. Olds practically sold out his holdings in Reo in 1929, because he lost faith in the management," a statement from the Olds faction said. "Since that time, however, he has been accumulating more stock. We don't care to state just how much stock Mr. Olds has at this time."

The Olds group also denied that the veteran industrialist planned to put a Diesel motor in the Reo automobile once control was assured. "The charge," Olds said, "is ridiculous. The Hill-Diesel Co., which I control, manufactures marine and stationary engines only."

Trowel Club to Map Summer Camp Plans

Plans for the social year and for the summer recreational camp will be acted upon at the monthly meeting of the Trowel Club, No. 193, Masons of the Commerce and Interior Departments, at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday, Scholl's Cafe, 1032 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Buffet supper will be served upon conclusion of the business. President Mark H. Burnham has requested prospective guests to notify Secretary William P. McDonald, 433 Buchanan street northwest.

Turkish War General, Envoy to Reich, Dies

Berlin, April 15 (AP).—Gen. Kemalettin Sami Pasha, Turkish Ambassador to Germany, died today after a stomach operation. He was 49. He was 17 times wounded in the World War and at the time of the armistice headed the black list of the Little Entente.

Mustapha Kemal, Turkish dictator, a personal friend of the general, appointed him Ambassador to Berlin in 1925.

"Barn" Theater Plans To Be Adopted Tonight

Organization of Washington's "barn" theater will be undertaken tonight at an open meeting in the auditorium of the Mount Pleasant Library, Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest. Amateur groups have expressed interest in the amusement, according to Walter Pick, general manager.

Dates for try-outs for the company will be decided tonight.

The Week Abroad

By Andre Vulliet.

The steering committee of the disarmament conference met again on Tuesday and, after weary talk, called the conference for the latter part of May. Nothing was said to justify overoptimism, except that there was a distinct feeling that tension had relaxed and that peace would be preserved, "in spite of international conversations."

Yet, in this decisive phase, the disarmament question seems to be deadlocked by a Franco-German deadlock.

"Germany," as Dr. Goebbels, her minister of propaganda, said last Friday, "is immovable on the point of honor." The point of her honor is equality of armaments. This was granted to her in principle in December, 1932. But she wants it also in fact and she has made up her mind to get it at any cost, as her recently published armament budget reveals.

France has no point of honor at stake, but she has a pet claim—security. She stubbornly refuses to admit Germany's rearmament, on the logical and juridical ground that the sole purpose of this conference is disarmament and that only a decision of the general commission can modify this program. But, at the same time, she will not disarm unless she obtains such guarantees as she has been seeking for years.

* * * *

All that is not new. But what is new is the growing feeling in London that France might get such guarantees.

Great Britain, for the first time in years, is growing fidgety about Germany's expenditures for armaments. The latter's intention of increasing her navy and aviation in huge proportions hits Britain on a sore spot and leaves her hesitant between two solutions. The prospect of a large German flying fleet concerns Britain as much as did the powerful German navy in 1914.

She must either arm up to her neighbor's strength or obtain disarmament all the way around. Since the first solution would rapidly smash the recently balanced budget back into the red, a limitation of armaments is of imperative necessity.

"Substantial reduction of armaments * * * is the fundamental condition for agreement on any arms convention," said Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, in Geneva.

* * * *

The cost of bringing France in line would be some sort of commitment guaranteeing her security. British public opinion, of course, is still opposed to any continental entanglement. But the fact that the British government asked the French to state their demands concerning guarantees—and is considering them—is a sign that the idea of security, spurred by Germany's rearmament is being driven home to the islanders.

Mussolini himself, in a recent interview with a correspondent of the New York Times, declared that "to achieve a convention of general limitation of armaments, Italy was ready to go very far, even to sign reasonable guarantees."

In the preliminary talks of last week, and despite the Franco-German deadlock, there seemed to lie possibilities for an agreement centering around guarantees and a certain rearmament for Germany.

* * * *

War talk has cooled down notably in the last few weeks. It is still too early to set up the fireworks, but it seems that, even though disarmament should fail, those who expected war in the early spring are likely to lose their bets. Three days ago, Mussolini declared: "I am no optimist, but I see no immediate danger of war. They are wrong who say the atmosphere today is the same as in 1914. The economic strain is almost unbearable in most countries, but the will to war is absent. On this continent nobody wants war."

* * * *

Recognition of Soviet Russia by the three States of the Little Entente—Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—is considered imminent, it was announced last week in Geneva by Dr. Benes, Czechoslovakia foreign minister.

It may seem strange that Rumania could have signed a general pact of nonagression with Russia last year, prior to recognizing her. The pact called for a general commitment on the part of all the signatories not to invade one another, but the frontier between Rumania and Russia, that is, the status of Bessarabia, was not settled.

It is understood that Moscow is ready to waive all claims over Bessarabia, thus removing that thorn from the side of Russ-Rumanian relations.

When Soviet-Little Entente diplomatic relations are established, Belgium, Switzerland, Holland, Portugal and Bulgaria will be the only states in Europe still ignoring the Moscow government.

The rumor was widely circulated in Geneva that the Soviet will then be invited to join the League of Nations at the September assembly, and will accept. The importance of such a move, at a time when the prestige of the league is gravely impaired, cannot be overemphasized. There are now three great powers in the league and four outside. The entry of Russia into the league would reverse that proportion, and it can reasonably be presumed that France, whose foreign policy is based on the league will use all the influence that she may have left in Brussels and in other countries to uphold such an action.

German Firm to Pay In Blocked Reichmarks

New York, April 15 (AP).—The United Steel Works Corporation of Germany, announced today that it would pay the principal of Gelsenkirchen Mining Corporation 6 per cent notes owned by nonresidents of Germany in "blocked" reichmarks—the only medium of payment approved by the German government.

Of the $15,000,000 originally issued, $2,392,500 is outstanding. "Blocked" reichmarks customarily sell at a substantial discount below "free" reichmarks.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

SOME authors are as simple to add up as an honest meal check. Not so William Faulkner. To compute his merits and demerits is like wading through the intricate and spacious balance sheet of a 1929 holding corporation. If you discern a faintly unfavorable air behind my choice of similes you are quite right.

Of the 25 or so short stories Faulkner has written since publication of "These Thirteen" in 1931, 14 are now placed in a neat volume, "Dr. Martino and Other Stories" (Smith & Haas, $2.50). They show him, at his diarrhoeic worst, to be still fuddling pensively over the muck-heap of human frailty. At his chastened best, he gives us something like O. Henry in an oh-so-literary manner. Somewhere underneath is one of the few natural writers we have in America—a man born to write with absolutely individual magic and vitality. Computing all this is the rub.

THEO. HALL.

* * * *

I dare say I'll get shot when I maintain that what Faulkner needs, and what in two stories he has been given in this book, is the guiding hand of the Saturday Evening Post. The two prime insistences of the Post, that the tales it prints shall be understandable in craftsmanship and shall be palatable to the great bulk of readers, are precisely the disciplines to benefit Faulkner. I am by no means saying that the Saturday Evening Post sets the best literary standards of the country; many writers, I know, go flat, dull and mechanical under such conditions. But the wild and fertile talents of Faulkner can take such pruning and be the better for it. Let us see.

"Turnabout" and "Mountain Victory" are the two stories reprinted from The Post. They are both, in schoolgirl hyperbole, "simply stunning"—the first for its clear-cut action, its picture of the comparative courage of British torpedo-boat boys and American fliers during the war; the second for its atmosphere and for the pathetic love of a mountain girl and the loyalty of an old Negro toward "Marster Major Soshay Weddel," young Louisianian going home after the Civil War. Sharp and beautiful, these tales show Faulkner at his best.

* * * *

For I do not call it best when Faulkner writes a hometown detective story in "Smoke," or a tale of frustrated miscegenation in "Elly." Or of the compound horror of miscegenation's aftermath in "Wash," or of a backwoods murder in "The Hound," flavored by the animal's dismal howlings and the item of the corpse's arm coming on as the murderer pulled the decaying body from a hollow tree.

Two tales, "Death Drag" and "Honor" touch with heavy sentimental hand upon the life of aviators—and exhibit as much humor as Faulkner ever attempts. That tends to save them.

But "Dr. Martino" is frail and febrile. "Beyond," which tells of a man's dying and going up to some heaven to talk to Robert Ingersoll, is a freshman theme. The tale of an amputated leg which wanders off and gets people in trouble, entitled, with marvelous simplicity, "Leg," offers all the ellipties and complexity of Kipling in his elder days—in other words, pure literary snobbishness.

* * * *

"Black Music" narrates the whimsy of an architect's clerk who turned into a Greek satyr for one evening. Its first paragraph is worth quoting:

"This is about Wilfred Middleton, fortune's favorite, chosen of the gods. For 56 years a clotting of the old gutful compulsions and circumscriptions of clocks and bells, he met walking the walking image of a small, snuffy, nondescript man whom neither man nor woman had ever turned to look at twice, in the monotonous shopwindows of monotonous hard streets. Then his apotheos's soared glaring and to him at least not brief, across the unfathomed sky above his lost earth like that of Elijah of old."

Now there is in the heart of that a deft notion—describing a man by an infinity of mirrored reflections. And there is a certain amount of good writing, though not, assuredly, much. And there is vitality. But the impression of the whole, I am constrained to say, is sheer bombast.

Which is what spoils William Faulkner.

William Lyon Phelps.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

"The Return of the Native."

This novel by Thomas Hardy was first published in 1878, and is generally and correctly regarded as its author's masterpiece. All lovers of Hardy's stories admire this work; but only a few know that in 1929 a beautiful, limited, illustrated, and not so very expensive edition appeared. The edition is limited to 1,500 copies, of which 500 are reserved for England. (Harpers). The distinctive feature, apart from the thick paper and large type, is that the tall volume has 12 full-page woodcuts and numerous head and tailpieces by Miss Clare Leighton, one of the leading woodblock artists of Great Britain. She has also illustrated Thornton Wilder's "The Bridge of San Luis Rey."

The opening chapter of "The Return of the Native" is like an overture to a Wagnerian opera. It is a description of Egdon Heath. This sombre stretch of furze is perhaps the leading character in the story; it seems to have a personality of its own, and profoundly affects the characters and fortunes of all the men and women who live near it. The Heath "motif" appears again and again in the narrative, like a motif in a vast music-drama. At the beginning of the novel, the Heath is described at the moment when day is fading into twilight—what the people in Georgia call the "first dark." The Heath then, like some sinister, nocturnal predatory creature, seems to awake and listen.

I advise Americans who are planning a journey to England this summer to go down into Dorsetshire, and there, very near the county town of Dorchester, go out to the edge of the Heath, and see it as twilight comes on. It will give a new and vital interest to reading the novel.

I shall never forget the September afternoon when I went out to this tremendous Heath. I waited for the approach of darkness and got a thrill. The sombre Thing looked exactly as the great novelist described it. And then, as we were watching, the full harvest moon rose on the silent scene.

French Republic Workers Protest Slashes in Pay

Paris, April 15 (AP).—Tens of thousands of government employes, parading under red flags throughout the provinces, today began two days of nation-wide strikes and demonstrations against pay cuts.

The chant of the Internationale was heard in more than a hundred cities and towns as the marchers flaunted banners inscribed with "down with the government," "down with the decree laws," and "down with ruinous deflation."

But the red Sunday passed without bloodshed.

Veiled threats of general strikes were contained in resolutions adopted at mass meetings, to which paraders carried written protestations against the government.

It was the day of provincial functionaries. Those in Paris are awaiting "National Protest Day" tomorrow when public service employes plan to demonstrate at their places of work during the hour of the strike.

Gas, Electric Charges Here Below Nation

Comparative Table Shows Washington Rates at Low Mark.

Gas and electricity rates for residential service in Washington were favorably compared with rates for similar service in cities throughout the Nation in an announcement made yesterday by the District Public Utilities Commission.

A table issued by the commission showed that Washington residents pay an average of 37 cents less per 1,000 cubic feet of gas containing 600 British thousand units per foot than the average amount paid by residents of 22 other cities. Washington had the second lowest rates, those of St. Louis, using natural gas, being slightly lower.

In a like manner it was shown that the average consumer of electricity in Washington pays a monthly bill ranging from $1.95 to $3.09, while for the whole country the average consumer's bill runs from $3.85 to $4.37.

The Washington figure is even smaller than the average for 13 cities with municipally owned plants which runs from $2.36 to $3.33. In each case the figures are for consumption of 50 and 80 kilowatt hours.

Garden Sale Open April 21 At Cathedral

Event to Be in Bishop's Garden; Capital Goes Flower-Minded.

Nearly all of Washington apparently has centered its intent on plants, flowers and "anything green that grows." First, in the palest dawn of spring, there was the hustle and bustle of preparing gardens. Countless Washington residents, from those whose homes are surrounded by acres of rolling velvet to those who proudly boast of a square foot of Mother Earth, engaged in that pastime. Then there were the hopes concerning the temperamental weather and the brave cherry blossom trees. And now the meek and modest herb is at last to have a bit of the bright light and public attention.

Commencing Saturday, April 21, there is to be a unique garden sale of herbs in the bishop's garden of Washington Cathedral. This sale, for the benefit of the work of All-Hallows Guild, the Garden Guild of the National Cathedral, is to continue throughout the season. There will be especially attractive features during the ten days from April 21, through April 30, for the many visitors here for the cherry blossom fete, as well as for the week when historic gardens are open in Virginia. This event is to take place in a newly developed little cottage herb garden near the Norman arch entrance to the bishop's garden, which also is open to visitors during the same hours, from 9:30 a. m. to 6 p. m. each weekday. Throughout the country there seems to be a new and increasing interest in the sweet-scented herbs whose use and enjoyment goes back to the earliest days of gardening. Many varieties are still rare in this country; but the Cathedral Garden Guild has been raising in quantity well-rooted pot-grown plants, many from English seed, and is offering for sale those kinds especially desirable for flavoring and for fragrance.

These fragrant plants and other things of interest to garden lovers will be in charge of the garden committee of All-Hallows Guild. Mrs. John H. Gibbons is president of the guild; Mrs. G. C. F. Bratenahl, chairman of its garden committee. Among those actively assisting are Mrs. James E. Freeman, wife of the Bishop of Washington, Mrs. Robert S. Brookings, Mrs. William Cabell Bruce of Baltimore; Mrs. Joseph Fletcher; Mrs. Sherman Flint, Mrs. Louise S. Greene, Miss Belle Gurnee, Mrs. McCook Knox, Miss Mary S. Lawrence, Miss Elizabeth D. Long, Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, Mrs. George B. McClellan, Mrs. T. H. B. McKnight, Mrs. Jesse H. Metcalf, Mrs. C. F R. Ogilby, Mrs David A. Reed, Miss Belle Sherwin, Mrs. Charles G. Warden, Mrs. William H. Wilmer, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Charles F. Wilson.

Clothes Styles Direct Trends In Beauty Aids

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE TREND OF fashions directs the trend of make-up. The neckline of dresses, the angle of hats, the predominating shades, all these factors influence the manner in which a woman applies her powder, rouge, mascara and eye shadow.

It is no longer the day when certain colors belong exclusively to certain types. The range in all make-up products enables blonde, brunette and titian go in for any colorful costume they choose.

Actual examples of this will be brought before the public Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon in the theater of an F street store. Miss Edyth Thornton McLeod, producer of style and beauty shows in the large cities of the country, will present a "Beauty and Fashion Cruise" in five scenes.

The first, "Ship Ahoy," salutes the importance of harmony and make-up in daytime costumes. The second, "Ship Shape," is a demonstration of correct posture, rhythmic exercises and a special massage. In scene three, the audience is granted a "Peep Through the Port-hole" at a clever little lesson on care of the skin at home and abroad. The fourth scene for "Sun and Water Babies" teaches simple solutions for the burning problem. Scene five is an "Evening on High Seas," in which formal frocks are high-lighted by radiant make-up.

After the show guests will be invited to consult specialists, on any personal make-up problems. The last three days of the week will be given over to a regular school teaching the technique of this art.

Homey Drinking.

There is more of a homelike air to pewter than to almost any other metal. It's soft sheen, not as dazzling as silver, has a look of being used, and being quite at home in service.

This accounts, perhaps, for the charm of the pewter highball glasses and tray on sale in a Connecticut avenue shop. The tray is large enough to hold a dozen glasses and the glasses contain an ample drink.

The set would grace any sideboard, and be a pleasure to put to practical use.

Port Light.

A few ship's lamps are on sale, reduced now to $1.49.

Their base is shiny brass trimmed with miniature windows of red glass. They're surmounted by a parchment shade painted with sea scenes.

Helps Wives and Golfers.

If there is anything worse than listening to a man's oft-told tale, it's hearing an account of the golf game he lost because of his sore hands. Perfect strangers might have to put up with this, but wives don't. They can tactfully take the liberty of shopping for their husbands and bringing home a golf glovette—a tailored semiglove designed to protect the golfer's hands.

These allow free wrist action, but save the sensitive parts of the hand from callouses and blisters. The half fingers are tapered to prevent buckling and rolling.

They have been put to the test many times, and bear the indorsement of leading professional and amateur golfers.

Medium Fancy.

The hostess who entertains frequently, or the hostess who entertains haphazardly, does not care to bring out best glassware on every occasion. But neither do they like to pan off thick and heavy glasses on their guests.

A local shop rises to the occasion with some cocktail goblets, thin and light. Their blown stems have a bulbous expansion, and inside of this is the tiny glass figure of a jockey on horseback, or a more ...ate symbol of cocktails, the red-plumed rooster.

These offer a novel change from the more standard glasses and never fail to enchant the guests.

A Farewell to Wrinkles.

A cream concoted to correct wrinkles, crows feet, and sagging cheeks has been reduced to 59 cents from its former $2 status.

A great many women who doubt but would like to test the efficacy of wrinkle creams will find this a safe, and inexpensive chance to experiment. But they musn't forget one application will hardly perform miracles. It takes consistent usage of any product to show results.

• • • •

Small, Light and Colored.

Cocktail tables of Florentine workmanship are intricately designed in all manner of curley-cue designs, in many different colors.

These are nice to be brought out to make a guest more comfortable or to be used on the sun porch. Their lightness enables them to be moved about with ease.

They have been chemically treated to make them alcohol proof. The price, $1.00.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Victor Herbert—Therese Foerster

The Irish composer was in Stuttgart as a young cellist when the lovely young diva Therese Foerster arrived from the Vienna Opera House, and, romantically enough, she needed coaching and he volunteered. Walter Damrosch was responsible for their triumphant entry into New York; they took a honeymoon voyage across the Atlantic and entered the Metropolitan Opera, where critics praised Therese as Herbert watched from the orchestra pit. Later, she figured as inspiration for the graceful heroines of Herbert's enduring light operas.

Like the Brownings, They Had Common Meeting Ground—Music.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

VICTOR HERBERT, musician one of the few outstanding composers America has contributed to the musical world, found his truest source of inspiration in a romance with a woman who, like himself, was a worshiper at the shrine of the fine arts.

Kindred in tastes and sympathies they were ideally mated. Even as the Robert Browning found in poetry and literature the source of their love, the Herberts made melody the bridge that was to link their lives. Of different races, Herbert a typical Irishman and Therese Foerster Herbert as typically Teuton, music was their common meeting ground.

It was because of Therese Foerster the women of Herbert's compositions were such attractive creatures, dainty, sweet and refreshing as pictured by him through the magic of melody. In his sphere of the operetta there was opportunity to visualize this type and there is no doubt the musical interpretations he gave to these characters did much to popularize them and win a permanent place for his compositions in the hearts of music lovers.

Never a Vulgar Line.

He wrote songs and melodies beloved by the Nation, and a critic once said of him, "he never wrote a vulgar line." He is master of the operetta, a phase of his art which he lifted from the realm of the frequently mediocre to the rank of classic. With Sir Arthur Sulivan he will rank as unsurpassed in musical history as the creator of light opera, the class of work whose melodies are treasured in the musical memories of the people.

Victor Herbert came to America when he was 27, Irish by birth, but having passed most of his life in Germany where his natural musical inclinations were heightened by contact with a people so instinctively sensitive to melody. He was a cello player by profession and obtained a place with the orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera House, which then, as now, demanded a high standard of musical background from its orchestra members. Much of his life in America centered around Manhattan and his gentle wraith still haunts its musical centers.

Herbert was born in Dublin on February 1, 1859. His father was a lawyer, his mother the daughter of Samuel Lover, an Irish author whose "Rory O'More" and "Handy Andy" won him fame. But he was musician, painter, song writer, comic opera librettist as well as poet and Irish patriot.

In his grandfather's home Victor Herbert became familiarized with good music and literature. It was Samuel Lover who advised his mother to take him to Germany for a musical education. Her remarriage to Dr. Carl Schmidt and removal to Stuttgart made the grandfather's advice easy to follow.

He was put in college and for a time music seems to have been a side issue. His mother begged him to learn the 'cello, but the young collegian was too occupied with his studies. Then came a chance for him to substitute for the flutist in the school band. This appealed to him and he learned the flute in two weeks—no slight musical achievement.

That was the end of drifting for Victor Herbert. From that moment music became his abiding passion. He took up the study of the 'cello, joined orchestras and majored in music. He became a member of the court orchestra as cellist and experimented continually with theory, harmony and other foundation work that was to flower later in composition.

The Composer "Who Never Wrote a Vulgar Line" Married a Diva.

In 1886 romance broke over the horizon of his life. To the Stuttgart Opera came a lovely young diva named Therese Foerster, from the Vienna Opera House.

Fraulein Foerster needed coaching and Victor Herbert volunteered for the pleasant task; hours were passed at the piano.

Then entered Dr. Walter Damrosch, the grand old man of American music, to play the part of good fairy. He was in search of voices for the German Operas to be given at the Metropolitan in New York, of which his father, the late Dr. Leopold, had been director. Therese Foerster was one of his first choices for the German opera experiment.

But Therese did not want to leave Germany. When pressed for a reason she confessed she was engaged to Herr Victor Herbert, the cellist of the orchestra. Damrosch finally invited Herbert to come along as first cellist, and Therese's objections were overcome. Both signed contracts to appear at the Metropolitan Opera House in the fall.

Honeymoon Voyage.

That summer Therese and Victor were married, so the trip to New York turned out to be a honeymoon voyage.

Victor Herbert sat in the orchestra pit and watched his wife, a gay, gallant figure on the Metropolitan stage. The critics wrote of her: "An artist of exceptional ability—fine stage presence, and with a dramatic soprano voice of great beauty and power. Well fitted to the role allotted to her."

In the main, the Herberts were happily married. Her musical fame did not keep pace with his, and now and then this caused some conflict. But she was happy in her home, and their five children, two of whom survived childhood. Ella Victoria, the eldest, is now Mrs. Robert Stevens Bartlett, of New York City, and Clifford Victor Herbert, a son, is still alive. It is strange, neither of his children are musical.

Washington remembers Victor Herbert's last appearance here in the early twenties. He came to appear before a Congressional committee to fight the composers' battle against the radio, which was cutting composers' incomes through records, sheet music and piano rolls. Holding court for the newspapermen at the Willard Hotel, he even sang and played his cello for them.

Suddenly on May 27, 1924, Herbert died. By coincidence, at the moment of his death Station WEAF was playing a selection over the radio from his "It Happened in Nordland."

Then, too, life ended for Therese Foerster Herbert, although physically she survived him for a few months.

And who can doubt that, in the words of one of Herbert's greatest songs, "O Promise Me," they took their "love together to some sky" on the wings of song.

Simplicity Furniture's Keynote In William and Mary Period

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

COZINESS and an appreciation of simplicity crept into English homes when William of Orange and Mary took the throne. They brought with them the feeling of domesticity that characterizes Dutch homes.

Lots of Paneling.

The rooms were still paneled from the floor to the ceiling, though they were finished in a simpler manner—not so much carving and decoration as in the Elizabethan period.

Much of the furniture was brought from Holland by the wealthy courtiers, and many pieces were designed by the craftsmen who were patronized by the King.

Queen Mary was much interested in embroideries and needlework as well as in collecting rare and beautiful china; these interests of hers gave added impetus to the art of beautifying homes.

The furniture itself became more graceful. The carving was more restrained and done in simpler taste than in the preceding periods.

The upholstery was in rich fabrics and colors, giving an air of elegance to the rooms. Damasks, brocades, velvets, petit point and tapestries were used with trimmings of braid and fringe. Some of the furniture was decorated in gilding and lacquers in brilliant jewel colors.

Some of the outstanding pieces of this period were chairs, tables, highboys, lowboys, double-hooded cabinets, settees, sofas, secretaries, beds, desks and buffets.

The chairs had what is known as the "X" stretchers. The cross-pieces of wood connecting the legs at the base were shaped like the letter "X" to give weight and proportion. The backs of the chairs were so high and heavy the stretchers were necessary for support at the base.

The gate-leg table, so popular in homes of today, were first designed and used in this period.

What Today Means

"Aries."

If April 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 10 a. m. to noon, from 1 to 3 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 8 a. m., from 4 to 6 p. m. and from 11 p. m. to midnight.

In your social and business contacts on this date, try to avoid any close association with a person evidencing vulgar tendencies, or who desires by loud talking to attract attention to himself, especially in public places. While it is not fair to hold you responsible for some one else's conduct, unfortunately some one might hastily judge you by your companion, so endeavor not being placed in this embarrassing position. April 16 should prove propitious for the negotiating of new business deals.

If April 16 is your natal day, do not allow yourself to get into the habit of trying to discover aches and pains. A great many people born on this date seem to really get a big kick in trying to get sympathy for some purely imaginary ailment. Get out of the habit of going to bed at night wondering if you are going to feel "fit" in the morning. Healthy thoughts will help you have a healthy body, so think right.

The child born on April 16, as it grows up, should be taught to exercise properly. Care should be taken that it has its meals at regular hours, and it should not be allowed to nibble between them. Children born on April 16 should not be allowed, on various pretexts, to neglect their school work. Children born on this date are mentally bright and capable, but, as a rule, have to be made to apply themselves, as they would rather do something else than study.

BACHELOR—of ARTS

By John Erskine

The Story So Far.

When Alec Hamilton returned to Columbia for his sophomore year, he felt himself a much wiser man. Most of his wisdom had been gleaned from women. Gladys, the college widow, had taught him that even a gold digger can be shaken off—when there is no more gold to dig. Betty Whistle, of Binghamton, had revealed the dangers of hammock sitting, even when one is, at heart, faithful to another. But red-haired Mimi, with whom he had fallen in love at first sight, had given him a purpose in life and a reason for growing up. Mimi was a straight shooter. Almost as soon as she had entered college, her father had lost his money. Instead of going home to St. Louis, she had got a job as cashier in a drug store. Alec wanted to marry her immediately, but had to abandon the plan for lack of funds. Another obstacle was Woolsey, the bachelor professor, who also was in love with Mimi, and already had an education and a job.

Mimi wanted Alec to be a great man. It occurred to him that perhaps getting on the football team would be a good start. So he cut short his summer vacation and rushed back to college to try for the scrub. He made it somehow, only to conclude that being in training meant a kind of slavery—hard work, study whether you felt like it or not, and no glory worth the mention, while Woolsey and the other fellows were left free to court Mimi.

Chapter VII.

The football season passed more smoothly than Alec had hoped. Each day, when he finished his lunch at the training table at John Jay he would step across to the drug store and say hello to Mimi, and after the first few weeks, as soon as his marks justified it, the coach let him come down in the early evening. He would take her to the Nemo or they'd sit on a bench on Morningside drive and look out over Harlem. Several times she came to the games. Tom brought her twice, Jim once, Albert once, Woolsey never. Tom must have arranged it. That is, she and Tom together.

She did not see him make a touchdown or contribute to the immortality of one who did. She never saw him play. He never played. It was a fortunate year, and the casualties among the competent were not sufficient to bring Alec on the field. But at the end of the season Barrows shook hands with him, said that his loyalty had been appreciated, and quoted something from Milton about standing and waiting, which Alec thought misplaced, since he had been waiting but not standing.

For the first time in his life he studied. The coach saw to that. He began to like some of the courses—Barth's particularly. The thin man talked of Savonarola, of Machiavelli or Leonardo da Vinci as though they were alive, important neighbors. Barth had a personal admiration for them, almost pathetically personal. They went in for everything and got excited over life. Though for the most part they also got into trouble, Barth held that they had had a grand time.

Charm of Courage.

Savonarola appealed to Alec more than the others, not because of the religious note, but because the monk had such desperate nerve. He was beginning to understand the charm of courage. That was Barth's phrase. Barth said that when life opened a door to these great Renaissance men they just took a chance and went in.

And, although they were virile, they were fond of the arts, like music and painting. This surprised Alec. He had supposed that men were one thing and artists another. The evidence on the subject was mixed. The coach, for example, had never indicated an interest in painting, but, on the other hand, Bill Barrows had quoted Milton.

Perhaps it was his reflections on this theme which led Alec to music.

Partly, of course, it was the accident to the victrola at the house. During the football season the house had seen little of him, though at a few rushing sessions he had shown himself, as Tom wished, and seven freshmen, under the pull of his glamour, had been taken into the family. But now that football was over, he signed up for the first house dance, and at the last moment Mimi caught cold and had a fever, and the victrola broke down. As to Mimi, he was forced to attend the dance alone. As to the victrola, being now a strong man of the Renaissance variety, he persuaded his brethren to engage Wally Blake and his jazz orchestra. Besides Wally and his saxophone there was a piano and a violin, and, of course, the traps, four in all. They would perform from 9 p. m. to breakfast for $10 a head. Alec led seven other brethren in the painful contribution of $5.

In his room in John Jay he dressed carefully for the dance, thinking of Mimi and her aspirin. Tough luck she had to miss the first party he could take her to that year! When he arrived at the house, the jazz experts were operating in the middle of the second floor, between the head of the stairs where you came up and the foot of the other stairs where you sat out with your girl, if you had a girl—the very steps where Tom had sat disconsolate that night when Gladys had climbed over him to explore the upper regions.

Circles Past With Brunette.

"Hello, Alec! Why stag?"

"She's got the flu," called Alec impulsively, then regretted such a public bulletin. Thrusting his hands in his coat, he pushed through the dancing couples into the library, where on normal evenings occurred the poker games. Now it was filled with human bodies barging around in slow motion. He sat on the window sill and studied the scene without sympathy. The music was good, but loud. The room was fiendishly hot, except by the window sills, where the draft on his person threatened pneumonia. He noticed how the girls glued themselves against their partners and gazed up in almost liquid flattery. Loneliness caused irritation.

"They can't all be cuckoo over their men," he reflected.

"What's keeping her?" inquired Tom as he waltzed by. He asked for friendship's sake, but Alec glared at him. He had told him once. Tom steered the brunette to the other end of the floor, against the pool table, where the unattached brethren, the replacements, were waiting to be called on.

"Do you mind dancing with him for a moment?"

Through the crowd he shoved to Alec's window seat. "What's wrong?"

"She's sick. I told you once."

"That's tough!" said Tom cheerfully. "Don't let it show so in your face. We've more girls than we need anyway. One more pair of elbows and it would be a regular log-jam. I'll let you have the next dance with mine."

"Thanks," said Alec, rising from the window sill and dusting off his coat. "When they stop to breathe, I'll tell Wally Blake he's made good with us."

Alec became still more thoughtful. "I suppose, when they play it well, the way you do they make a lot of money."

During the next dance, Alec lingered near the piano, to see how Wally drew profitable sweetness from the sax, aided only by fingers and a book of instructions.

Several weeks later, of a Tuesday evening, he was seated on a trunk in the garret of the fraternity house. It was no larger than a closet, and you couldn't stand up in it. Ventilation it had none, and its light was an electric bulb, swung low from the ceiling.

Alec Glares.

With the glare in his eyes, Alec put the saxophone to his lips, and leaned over to glean instruction from the book spread out on the floor.

His instrument seemed far louder than the one Wally Blake used, and the tone was less reliable. The upper notes bleated, the low notes suggested pigs, and from the middle register came every now and then an improper threat, as though it were about to be sick.

He laid the sax down, wiped his lips, lifted the book to a better light, and once more read the directions. Ah, there was the trouble—he shouldn't blow so hard! Steady but easy, that was the formula. No wonder he had been getting dizzy! A minimum of breath, the book said.

The melody he was working on was called "the Last Rose of Summer," but it didn't sound right. Not even when he got the notes. He recalled hearing some one say it was the original of "Fair Harvard," but he could recognize "Fair Harvard" with his eyes shut, and this tune was away off. Well, you couldn't be critical when the book was thrown in free.

He did the first line over, several times. Now it began to come—that is, it began to sound like the time before. He was getting control. But how mournful! Gosh, in a moment he'd make himself cry! He started again, a bit faster, to brighten it up.

So intent on his work was he, he did not hear the footsteps mounting to his studious retreat. The garret door flung open. Two angry faces blinked at his dazzling bulb.

"Clean daft!" roared Tom. "Off his nut!"

CAPITAL KITCHEN

With Loaf Cake on Hand Unexpected Guests Easy to Feed.

By Susan Mills.

ONE of the most terrifying bugaboos that haunts the hostess' minds is "What will I serve if I have unexpected guests?"

She knows she can scrape up a salad, or cream, something that comes out of a can, or find ingredients with which to make a toasted sandwich, but the dessert problem is more perplexing.

Chocolate Spice Loaf.

9 ounce package dry condensed mince meat
½ cup cold water
½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1¾ cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
2 tablespoons milk
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted

Break dry condensed mince meat into pieces. Add cold water and place over heat. Stir until all the lumps are broken.

Bring to a brisk boil and continue for three minutes. Cool. Cream the butter, add sugar and continue creaming until well blended. Add beaten egg yolk. Mix and sift the flour, baking powder, salft, nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves.

Add alternately with milk to egg mixture. Then add melted chocolate and blend well. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white and the cooled mince meat. Bake in a buttered loaf or angel cake pan in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about three-quarters of an hour.

Courageous Tories Fought Ancestors of the D.A.R.'s

United Empire Loyalists of Canada as Proud an Organization as Daughters of Revolution Though on Opposing Sides of Conflict.

THIS WEEK'S annual invasion of the Capital by the "D. A. R.'s" calls attention to Canada's equally famous "U. E. L.'s." Although they have an identical origin—the American Revolution—these two associations occupy opposing sides of the great medal struck in the colonial cause.

The D. A. R.'s trace their descent from those who upheld the cause of the revolting colonies, while the U. E. L.'s are descended from the recalcitrant "Tories" who chose a United Empire in preference to a United States.

There were many of the latter in the original thirteen colonies, and the price of their allegiance was paid in full by enforced emigration to Eastern Canada.

Price of Loyalty.

Theirs was a case in which "King and country" proved a conflicting creed, for as the Colonial cause gained strength, the loyalty they continued to give their King brought upon them the darkest disfavor of their countrymen.

The United Empire Loyalists—as these "Tories" of the Revolution were to become known—found themselves at the close of the conflict aliens in their own land. Those who had taken up arms with the King's forces were looked upon as traitors and their property was confiscated.

The British government at length came to their aid with the offer of land in Nova Scotia on which they might settle with their families. Transportation was also arranged, and as a result the emigration of the loyalists to Canada was a movement of such proportions one historian, W. E. H. Lecky, says it "had hardly been paralleled since the Huguenots."

150th Anniversary.

The United Empire Loyalist Association of Canada is celebrating 1934 as "United Empire Loyalist Year." It marks the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the coming of the loyalists to what was then Upper Canada, now Ontario. This premier province, which spoke loudest on behalf of political freedom for Canada, has always been proud of its loyalist heritage.

Refugees from the colonies had been straggling into Eastern Canada since 1776—when 1,000 civilians followed Gen. Hull and the British troops to Halifax after the evacuation of Boston—but it was in 1783 the great influx took place. During that summer Nova Scotia received the evicted colonists in shiploads. Nova Scotia at that time included what is now the province of New Brunswick, and it was at a spot destined to become New Brunswick's capital, St. John, that the first batch of loyalists landed on May 18, 1783.

Old newspapers have preserved some interesting facts about the sailing of these exiles from New York to Nova Scotia. Since New York was virtually a British stronghold all through the Revolution it was there all arrangements were discussed, and the "Articles of Settlement" finally agreed on provided full provisions for the voyage.

Paternal Treatment.

The British government exercised a marked degree of paternity; the faithful subjects of His Majesty got one year's provisions or the equivalent in money, as well as a supply of warm clothing and medicines, to tide them over until the land in the new country should produce a harvest. Land in each new community was set aside for the support of a church and a school.

Three voyages were made by the British transport Cyrus, which plied gallantly between New York and Nova Scotia from May to October of 1783.

These immigrants who had lost lands and reputation in "German George's" forlorn cause, and were now about to begin life anew in an inhospitable land, were mostly members of the upper classes in the colonies; the high standards they set up served as a proud pattern for those who were to come after them. Many of the men could boast a Harvard degree and the women had all the graces and refinements of the cultured classes of their time. Gently nurtured as they were, they were forced, quite literally, to put their hands to the plough—and they did not turn back.

The land which had been given them for settlement was little less than primeval forest. It had to be cleared before they could build any shelter, and then followed an anxious time of waiting for sufficient crops from the seed which the British government had supplied. Yet, in spite of all the difficulties that faced them, they won through, and today the claim of a Canadian to the letters "U. E. L." after his name, is perhaps the proudest that he can make.

City Thronged With Delegates To Conventions

Children of the Revolution, D. A. R. Among Organizations Here.

BEGINNING today Washington will be for a week the convention Capital of the Nation. Between 3,000 and 4,000 delegates are here to attend the sessions of the Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which opens at 10 o'clock this morning at Constitution Hall. The Congress will continue through Friday.

• • • •

The Children of the American Revolution will begin their thirty-ninth annual convention at 10 o'clock tomorrow in the Red Cross Building. Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, president of the organization, will welcome the delegates from every State in the Union. Business meetings will be held each day until Thursday.

Parents, Teachers to Meet.

THE ANNUAL convention of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers will open tomorrow at the Wardman Park Hotel. The Rev. Irving W. Ketcham, of Peck Memorial Chapel, and Dr. Charles T. Warner, of St. Alban's Parish, will pronounce invocations.

The important business of the meeting is the election of officers. From the nominees presented by Mrs. G. E. White, chairman of the committee, a State president, seven vice presidents, secretary, treasurer, historian and delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations will be elected.

• • • •

"What My State is Doing to Train Today's Child for Tomorrow's World" will be discussed tomorrow afternoon by the Middle Atlantic States' Council.

• • • •

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will introduce the principal speaker, John Martin, author and storyteller for children, at the annual dinner to be held tomorrow evening at the Wardman Park Hotel.

A convention of wide interest to residents of this region will be the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be in session two days starting tomorrow in Baltimore.

Prof. D. W. Willard, of George Washington University, and Assistant Corporation Counsel W. A. Roberts will be the principal speakers at the meeting of the Monday Evening Club tonight at 8 o'clock at the Willard Hotel. The subject of discussion will be "Efficiency in Public Welfare Administration."

The Women's Democratic Educational Council will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the Women's City Club. Mrs. Grattan Kerans will preside.

The Delta Sigma Chapter of the Delphian Society will meet today at 10:30 o'clock in the Shoreham Hotel. A luncheon will follow the meeting.

Miss Ella Gardner, of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, will be the guest speaker tonight at the meeting of the Parent Teachers' Association of the Raymond School in the school auditorium.

Timely History.

THIS is Maryland's big year—the 300th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims—who didn't come over on the Mayflower—on Maryland soil.

Already there have been, and are continuing to be, many delightful entertainments and pageants in honor of the tri-centenary and every old home that can boast even one brick that has survived the days when Lord Baltimore devoutly named the territory for the Virgin is being brought forth into the limelight in no uncertain manner.

• • • •

Recently at a dinner party a lady who has one of the very oldest of all the Maryland estates—Chandler's Hope—was telling how even historians with the best intentions in the world will get inaccurate interpretation of the real facts about some of these old homes.

It was of famous "Mulberry Grove" the lady was speaking. This place, along with several others that are famous, originally was part of the land grant embraced in the charter of Chandler's Hope.

• • • •

Many people are under the delusion that the original house still stands at Mulberry Grove. The original house, however, was razed. The beautiful home now on that spot was built about 15 years ago by the present proud owners—Mr. and Mrs. Dana Stevens.

About a Cat.

GRACE DUNHAM GUEST, most tireless worker in the cause of reviving chamber music and the best of amateur choral entertainments here, has one of those sturdy, cheerful red-brick homes that has brought Georgetown increasing fame as artists, socialites and politicians have discovered what a grand place Georgetown is to live in.

• • • •

By far the most important personage in Miss Guest's home is not the cook—as one might imagine, though she is duly important—but "Hodgie."

Hodgie is a huge Persian cat, gorgeous yellow in color and fully cognizant of the dramatic powers of the waving golden plume that is his tail.

• • • •

Everybody in Georgetown knows and respects Hodgie, and no tour of houses and gardens in that historic town across the creek is complete if Hodgie is not to be seen discreetly licking his paws clean or just basking with closed topaz eyes in the spring sunlight in Miss Guest's lovely garden.

Singer an American to Own Detriment

Sonya Troyano Disappoints When She Proclaims Nationality.

Although her father is Albanian, her mother Italian, and her name Spanish, Sonya Troyano was born in America, is an American, and wants everybody to know it,

"I spend a lot of time trying to get it over to people that I am not a foreigner," she said yesterday at the Roosevelt Hotel, where she is a guest of Miss Helen Neville, chairman of the committee for the Troyano piano concert given yesterday afternoon at the Women's National Democratic Club.

Accent Gets Them.

"I can't understand," she continued, "why I make so much more impression on Americans when I assume a foreign accent and pretend I have never been in this country before."

She related an incident in which members of her audience were enthusiastic about some of her Spanish songs, but were obviously disgusted to find out she could sing American songs without a foreign accent.

"The truth is that Americans place a higher value on foreign artists than on their own," she asserted, "and I am like everybody else in that I want to do the thing that will make me a success. So, if people insist on my singing Spanish, Italian and French songs in the native manner, I am glad to oblige."

Since she speaks Spanish and Italian fluently, and has the sparkling eyes and black hair that characterizes Latin peoples, she might pass for a native of any of the southern European countries.

In fact, Claude G. Bowers, the American Ambassador, being convinced she was Spanish, went to the trouble of tracing her ancestry far enough back to discover a band of Spaniards once left their native country to roam over Europe and eventually settled in Albania. That, Miss Troyano thinks, probably accounts for her Spanish name.

Family Not Musical.

"I am the only musically inclined one in my family," she admitted. "The others go in for outdoor sports. My five brothers, American in appearance and ideas, are extremely interested in athletics; my sister has devoted most of her time to studying expression and Audiences Still Demand That "Foreign Touch" in Artists.

"I began it," she explained, "not because I had any inclination to be a singer, but because I was very thin; I thought voice lessons would help develop me."

After attending elementary school in New York, she went abroad to study music at Fontainebleau and at Seville, under Realito and Otero.

In Spain she did much concert work and also appeared on a number of radio programs. And while she was there she was offered the leading role in a Spanish operetta, the first time an American had been so honored.

Returning to this country, she spent a season here in Washington, where she appeared regularly on the Packard Parade radio program.

Since then she has done concert work in New York and has appeared regularly on WOR and programs broadcast by the International Radio Station.

Her program yesterday afternoon at the Woman's National Democratic Club included several Spanish songs, given in native costume. A distinguished audience, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, heard her.

Candidates' Hats Are in Ring For Coming D. A. R. Contest

A year is a long time for most persons to look forward to an election—even in National politics. Not so, political-minded members in D. A. R. circles who are already building campaign fences for their candidates in the president general race to be run 12 months hence.

Two nationally prominent figures already loom in the foreground: Dr. Flora Myers Gillentine, of Tennessee, former historian general of the D. A. R., and Mrs. William A. Becker, of New Jersey, National defense committee chairman.

The former, gaining a head start in the field, announced her platform early in March. It was published in several leading newspapers throughout the country, and pronounced, generally, a masterpiece in strategy.

Mrs. Becker, announcing her candidacy only two weeks ago, has yet to work out the details of her proposed program. Due to her long association in National defense work, her stand on this favorite issue is a foregone conclusion.

Dr. Gillentine is also a strong advocate of National defense. Other planks in her program include strict enforcement of immigration laws; enactment of uniform laws to aid in preventing crime; development of patriotism and loyalty through a program of historical education; D. A. R. support of movements seeking adequate care of soldiers and sailors disabled in service; expansion of the D. A. R. program combating socialistic and unpatriotic influences in the Nation.

Both women are college graduates; both active in club and patriotic organization work. Both have interesting and commanding personalities.

Mrs. Becker is a graduate of Smith College, where she obtained her A. B. degree in English. Interested primarily in civic and philanthropic work, she has a commendable record of constructive achievement.

During the war, she took an active part in the Liberty Loan drives, and assisted in Red Cross work. Charitable, church and patriotic organizations have benefited.

Dr. Gillentine has won an enviable niche in the field of education as well as a position of command in civic and club circles. Coming from a line of Southern statesmen whose Congressional activities were said to be equaled only by their "silver tongues," she is claimed by D. A. R. admirers to be a chip off the family block when it comes to oratory.

Students of three Southern colleges have called her "Prof." as they took notes on her lectures in psychology, history and education. The colleges have included the University of Florida, the University of Arkansas, and Arkansas State College, where she now teaches.

Her D. A. R. National offices to date, include vice president general, chairman of the preservation of historic spots and member of the committee on resolutions.

Mrs. Becker's National offices to date, have been organizing secretary general, and chairman of the committee on National defense, the latter which she has held for the past eight years.

STARTING her campaign for president-general of the D. A. R. in 1935, Dr. Flora Myers Gillentine, of Tennessee, has announced a platform emphasizing preparedness, crime prevention and education.

"Eat, Drink and Be Merry" With Author in Recent Book

The State Supreme in All the Country, Gastronomically Speaking, Says F. W. Stieff—Its Foods Known Throughout World.

By Katherine Smith.

"Remember Carroll's sacred trust,
Remember Howard's war-like thrust,
And all thy slumbers with the just,
Maryland, My Maryland."

MARYLAND scores again!

While she is waving flags, making speeches, singing songs, and opening wide the door of her hospitality, in celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of her birth, the old Free State ties on an apron, dons the white cap and is as one of the world's most famous culinary experts.

Maryland's claim to supremacy in the field of cuisine has been substantiated by one of her loyal sons, Frederick William Stieff, of Baltimore, who with the research of a scholar has run down, tabulated and compiled into a volume the recipes that have made this State famous. His "Eat, Drink and Be Merry in Maryland" reflects the gastronomic history and romance of the State through 300 years.

Advertising Did It.

Mr. Stieff became interested in Maryland food through his activities in community advertising. Member of a family that has been in the piano manufacturing business for 92 years, he had learned much of the State and its people through his business.

"I have a great deal of interest in community advertising," he explained, "and it occurred to me Maryland had been exploited in many ways, but never in the field of cooking. I started working on my collection of recipes on Labor Day and was through by the following Fourth of July.

"It was a hobby, and I found it fascinating. I would drive in my car to old homes, manors and inns and ferret out recipes that had been in families for generations."

Some of the recipes found by Mr. Stieff were as old as 500 years and had been handed down in families whose ancestors arrived in the Ark and the Dove. Many Marylanders of National fame contributed to the volume that was to celebrate their State's cuisine.

Maryland, according to Mr. Stieff, not only wields gastronomic supremacy in the United States, but can hold its own with Paris, Vienna and other European food capitals.

"There are no other three words that are as often printed on menus in this country and all over the world as are 'Maryland,' 'Chesapeake' and 'Baltimore,'" he said. "Moreover, there is no other State whose cooking is famous through all sections of a dinner menu.

"For instance, New England is famous for pies, codfish or beans, the Southwest for Chili and hot tamales, the Far West for crabs and Abalone steak, New Orleans for Creole cooking, but Maryland has famous dishes in every course."

"Begin with the oysters—none are better than the Chesapeake. Then the soup—we have crab-flake soup and crab soup Baltimore. As for terrapin, it is about the most aristocratic dish in the country. The Chesapeake gives us all sorts of fish, bass, bluefish, sea trout and croakers.

Full of Traditions.

"Then, too, Maryland is noted for its fowl: Ducks, canvas-backs, quail, goose and field birds. You see, the fowl feed on field grass, the cleanest food there is, and consequently, the meat is delicious.

"Bear and venison are typically Maryland products. Recipes for their preparation go back for generations.

"I don't forget the famous hot-breads, nor the corn-breads, corn pone and corn meal mush cakes.

"You can go right through the list, finding recipes and traditions all along the line."

Strange to say, the recipe most generally associated with the Old Free State, chicken a la Maryland, is not included in Mr. Stieff's volume.

"There is no such thing as chicken a la Maryland" he explained. "The Marylanders who made this fowl famous never thought of calling it by that name. To most of them 'a la' would mean nothing more than a Mohammedan god, but some outsiders with fancy ideas attached the name. So chicken Maryland style became 'a la-ed.'"

Mr. Stieff offers several recipes for chicken Maryland. It should be served, he points out, with cream gravy, and with corn cakes or corn meal mush cakes and crisp slices of bacon as accompaniments. Candied sweet potatoes make another good adjunct.

Emily Post offers a foreword in the volume and contributes a recipe. Among the other prominent Maryland contributors to the volume are John Charles Thomas, Christopher Morley, Senator Millard Tydings, Frederick Arnold Kummer, Commodore Thornton Robbins, Edwina Booth Crossman, Judge Samuel K. Dennis, Katherine Scarborough, Gerald Johnson and Col. John Philip Hill.

All of the recipes were obtained at their sources. Many were ferreted out of old attics and old trunks. Here is one for black bean soup, a typically Maryland creation, which was contributed by Mrs. Charles B. Trail, Frederick County:

Soak overnight in cold water 1 pint beans. Put the beans in 6 quarts cold water with ½ pound salt pork, a beef bone, 1 onion, 1 carrot, 1 turnip, 1 teaspoon cloves. Boil three or four hours. Then strain through collander, add a little cornstarch, thicken and boil a few minutes longer. Serve with slices of lemon and hard-boiled egg.

Chicken a la Tudor Hall.

Cut in pieces a young chicken and slices of sugar cured ham. Fry in equal parts of butter and lard. Set aside. In the same fat fry an onion and a tomato. When nearly done add a cupful of boiled rice, the chicken and the ham, and let fry together, stirring constantly. Add enough water to cover the whole and let boil slowly until done. Season with salt, pepper, bay leaves, chopped parsley and thyme. When cooked let dry out a little. Serve hot.

This recipe for Maryland beaten biscuits was contributed by Mrs. Charles Sterett Grason, Cornwalys Cross Manor: 3 pints winter wheat flour, ¼ pound lard, one-half ice-water and milk to make a stiff dough. 1 heaping teaspoonful salt. Work in the lard, add the liquid and beat with a club for 25 minutes. Make in small biscuits and bake in a hot oven.

Science Goes Nature Several Degrees Better

Bird Songs Served Up By Phonograph These Days.

Baltimore, April 15 (Spl.).—If you yearn to hear the song of the cuckoo or the lark or the mockingbird, there's no need to wander through the woods looking for one of the pesky birds.

All you have to do is to press a button underneath a stuffed specimen of the bird whose song you want to hear—and lo, the feathered songster does his stuff.

That's the latest innovation at the Maryland Academy of Sciences here. According to officials of the institution, there's nothing like it in the East, and nature lovers by the score are flocking to the academy to see and hear the birds.

It's done with phonograph records, according to Frank A. Woodfield, secretary of the academy. Taxidermists have skilfully mounted specimens of 35 birds familiar to Maryland, and they have been placed in the academy as a permanent exhibit. Underneath each bird is located a small electric button, and when it is pressed a mechanism is actuated which sets going a phonograph record bearing the song of the bird in question.

The bird songs are authentic, too. Each one was obtained by long and patient work in the field by ornithologists, who drove through the woods with a sound truck containing delicate recording instruments. Hearing a bird singing, they would dismount and secrete themselves nearby. When the bird would approach, they would switch on the recording devices and thus imprint upon the wax disc the trills of the forest dweller.

Thirty-four bird songs were thus obtained. Only one bird failed to come through—the great horned owl. An audition for this performer was arranged in the Bronx Zoo in New York.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THERE was a situation about baseballs that was beginning to make us bitter, but it's all right now.

All our life we have been going to ball games, and did any one ever bat a ball our way? He did not. And all those baseballs Babe Ruth has been autographing, did we ever so much as get a good look at one? We did not.

Year after year we have been sitting in the stands watching in anguish as ball after ball was fouled the wrong way, and here, only yesterday, we were sitting at our desk and along comes a letter from Earle Ferris, Babe Ruth's press agent, saying that the Babe is mailing us a baseball, a regulation league ball, at that, and autographed!

Isn't that just like life?

Thief Takes Hats.

He's not the same broadcaster without them. He seldom, if ever, uses them during a program, but he likes to know they're around. He feels they give him "atmosphere."

And now some wiseacre has walked off with practically the entire lot. The only one that was saved was the fire chief hat he was wearing. For the thief slipped in the night the funny man made his last broadcast.

One high hat, 30 years old, which he first wore in a vaudeville act, "The Rah Rah Boy."

One straw hat, cherished because he found it brand-new in Central Park 20 years ago.

One Princeton hat, given him by the Triangle Club when both were playing Syracuse in 1919.

Being an old-hat lover ourself, we can understand how the Fire Chief must feel. Had some one done something about the library of jokes, that would have been different.

Radio Service Man.

No longer is he regarded in his community as an amateur mechanic, a backyard tinkerer, who fools with your set in his spare time just to pick up a few extra dollars.

Finally he has attained a respected professional and business status, is joining Rotary clubs, &c.

We have this on the word of Walter Jones. Mr. Jones is a commercial engineer for one of our largest tube manufacturers and probably knows what he is talking about.

First thing we know the radio service man will be in the same class with plumbers.

The Nation's First Lady, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, will add one more broadcast to her rapidly mounting total when she addresses the forty-third Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Friday morning. Columbia has arranged to bring over some equipment.

The congress opens today, and National will pick up a speech by Mrs. Russell William Magna, D. A. R. president general, from 11:30 a. m. to noon.

Feminine Viewpoint.

Margaret Santry, The Post's interviewer of the Capital's "first ladies," brings the Nation's Second Lady, Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, to a WRC microphone at noon today.

Mrs. Garner will be heard during one of a twice-weekly series conducted by Miss Santry, in which women prominent in Washington official life give the feminine viewpoint on subjects of current interest.

Some of Franz Lehar's finest melodies, worked into a romantic tale of a Russian outlaw and a titled lady whom he kidnaped and tried to tame, will be the next offering of the Beauty Box Theater.

Destroyers Collide.

Tokyo, April 15 (AP).—The navy office announced that the government destroyers Sawakaze and Minekaze, each of 1,215 tons, collided in night maneuvers off Sasebo early today. There were no casualties but both ships were damaged.

BETTY WINKLER has just turned 19 and she's been in radio only a few months, but her bosses up in New York say she's one of the most promising actresses in the business.

It was called originally "Gypsy Love." Then Lawrence Tibbett and Catherine Dale Owen made a movie of it which Hollywood entitled "The Rogue Song."

Gladys Swarthout has been cast as Princess Vera. John Barclay will sing the Tibbett role of Yegor. In order to broadcast without cutting, the operetta has been divided into two parts, the first half to be aired tomorrow at 10 p. m., the second half a week later.

Do you work 18 hours a day, or even 12? If you are of middle age, beware of the consequences. How such a strenuous program affected the health and the blood pressure of Walter Goodman, and how he finally got back to normal, will be dramatized under the direction of Dr. Norman N. Bundesen, president of the Chicago Board of Health, in Horlick's "Adventures in Health" broadcast . . .

Does Gen. Johnson know about this, Mr. Goodman?

Whitecaps.

WRC—Music appreciation, D. C. Federation of Music Clubs, Helen Lyon, violin; Mary P. Clements, viola; Olive Pratt, piano, eighteenth century music, 9:45 a. m.; Mrs. John Nance Garner interviewed by Margaret Santry, noon; Lawrence Tibbett, 8:30 p. m.

WMAL — Opening baseball game, 2:45 and 5:15 p. m.; Babe Ruth's first broadcast, 8:45 p. m.; Dr. Walter Damrosch and John B. Kennedy, 10 p. m.

WJSV — Opening baseball game, Ted Husing and Arch McDonald, 2:45 p. m.; Rosa Ponselle, singing Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me," Rimsky Korsakoff's "The Nightingale and the Rose" and Verdi's "Merce Dillette Amiche," 9 p. m.; National League baseball managers discuss team prospects, 11 p. m.

How to Keep Well

A Hazard in Reducing.

There is considerable interest in dinitrophenol as an agent for reducing. It was noticed that some men working in the manufacture of munitions lost all of their excess poundage. This became a matter of common information among the employes of munitions plants. Finally it was determined that dinitrophenol was the substance which was responsible. Clinical study showed this was much the most effective medicine for weight reduction, but that it was also the most dangerous.

Drs. Wasserman and Goldsmith add a further study to the same effect. They tell of its use in 18 obese people who were sluggish, apathetic and passive. The remedy is unquestionably both effective and dangerous. They report: "The remedy is, therefore, unpredictably toxic to some patients, but its careful administration may be of empirical benefit."

This means that it is dangerous and it may cause death, and there is no way of knowing in advance whether it will harm a given person. No physician can look over a group of fat persons and say dinitrophenol will be dangerous for this one and safe for that one. He can only know where the rocks are by hitting them. However, if a case under medical supervision and control hits one of these rocks the medical attendant should be able to patch the hole or beach the ship before she is lost. If a person is taking it on his own he may not be more apt to hit a rock, but if he does, his chance of sinking in deep water is great. It is a dangerous method of reducing.

Dinitrophenol probably causes loss of weight by increasing oxidation. More oxygen is absorbed by the blood and used by the tissues. In other words, it causes the life fires to burn brighter. Therefore, it generally overcomes mental sluggishness and apathy at the same time that it brings about loss in weight.

This physiological action is similare to that of thyroid. Dinitrophenol, therefore, seems to act as a reducing agent somewhat in the same way that thyroid acts. It is more efficient and also more dangerous, but the difference is comparative. Thyroid is somewhat efficient and soemwhat dangerous.

Hot Water for Chilblains.

Mrs. P. H. B. writes: When I was 10 years old my parents moved to northern Wisconsin. I had to walk 2½ miles to school and the weather was sometimes below zero. We froze our feet and we were subject to chilblains. An old German doctor had us put our feet in hot water whenever they itched. The water was to be as hot as we could stand and we were to leave our feet in it until the water was cool. I can still see three of us sitting around a tub of hot water. We have not suffered from chilblains since Reply.

Yours is one of a half dozen letters telling of success by using this method, substantially. It is one of several good ones. Putting the feet in melted paraffin at a temperature of about 125 degrees Fahrenheit is a better one, but it is more troublesome. Treatment with ultraviolet is also a better one. But yours is a good method and it is cheap and convenient.

Commission Will Seek Restored Funds in Supply Bill.

Data showing that the effectiveness of Public Utilities Commission orders has been held up from 1 to 13 years by involved litigation, have been prepared by William A. Roberts, special counsel for the commission, for presentation at the hearing tomorrow night on a bill designed to terminate this delay.

The hearing will be held in the House Office Building by the Public Utility sub-committee of the House District Committee headed by Representative Loring M. Black, jr. (Democrat), New York.

The major objectives of the proposed legislation are to assess public utilities with the cost of appeals from commission orders and to limit such appeals to judicial questions.

Commission Saves Money.

Tabulations showing that the Public Utilities Commission has saved Washington consumers $11,179,369 directly and considerable indirectly since its formation in 1913 will be placed before the House in an effort to have the 40 per cent cut in the commission's appropriation restored to the District supply bill this week.

The figures were compiled by B. M. Bachman, chief accountant of the commission, and submitted by Riley E. Elgen, acting chairman of the commission, to Representative Ditter (Republican), Pennsylvania, a member of the House Appropriations sub-committee.

Frequently, under the present law, Roberts pointed out, cases which which have consumed weeks of testimony before the commission are reheard by a court which does not have the facilities for investigating and checking the factual findings.

"The experience of the past 20 years has shown that the present form of appellate procedure has resulted in undue and unreasonable delays and has not kept pace with the progress in administration law," he said.

His tabulations showed that the celebrated Capital Traction Co. litigation, started in April, 1914, was not terminated for 12 years, 9 months and 7 days. A Potomac Electric Power Co. case consumed almost ten years. The present telephone rate case has been tied up two years.

Improvement Is Needed.

"It is felt that the need for improvement in the method of reviewing decisions of the Public Utilities Commission, with particular emphasis on expediting the effect of the commissions' orders has become imperative," Roberts said.

"The procedure for the review of orders of the Public Utilities Commission in the District is unique. It provides for a statutory review of the orders of the commission, which is not only judicial but also legislative in character."

Passage of the bill would greatly expedite valuation cases, such as the pending valuation of the Washington Gas Light Co., once the case reached the courts. Utilities would no longer be able to hold a retrial on the factual issues which have consumed months of testimony before the commission.

Utilities would not be able to appeal at all from purely administrative orders in which neither rates nor confiscation of property are involved.

The commission contends that the assessment of litigation costs should be borne by the utilities, as are hearings at present, because often the commission is without funds to defend its orders in any involved litigation.

Bachman's tabulations showed that the greatest savings brought about by the commission since 1913 was $8,601,769 from annual reductions in the electric rate since 1924 under consent decrees.

Gas Rates Reduced.

Gas rates have been reduced $1,500,000 within this time, and a valuation of the Washington Gas Light Co. properties is now in progress with the aim of further reducing the rates.

Despite the fact that the commission has been unable to force a 10 per cent telephone rate cut, the commission has, according to Bachman, brought about a cut in the flat rate from $5 to $4.75 and increased the allowable calls on two-party lines from 35 to 40 a month. This saving is estimated at $802,600. An additional $10,000 has been saved the public, he said, by limiting the payments on hand sets.

Transfer of the operation of the gas appliance department to a separate division of the Washington Gas Light Co. has saved the public $200,000, he holds, through removal of its expense from operating expenses.

Refunds of deposits on gas mains has saved $15,000 and refunds on deposits for extensions of electric mains has saved $50,000.

During this time operation of the commission has cost $1,277,340.95 or $61,278 a year as against an average yearly saving of $537,684.

Mrs. Sidwell Dies; Teacher Here 50 Years

Mrs. Sidwell had been in ill health, but she was able to attend a gymnastic exhibition at the Wisconsin avenue branch of the school last Thursday.

Born in Salem, Ohio, Mrs. Sidwell came to Washington in 1884. She was a graduate of Wilson College at Chambersburg, Pa., and Vassar, and did alumni work for both institutions. She was a member of the Vassar Alumni Council for many years.

Upon coming to Washington, Mrs. Sidwell taught first at the Friends School. Here she met Mr. Sidwell, founder of the school. Then she went to Central High to teach. While a teacher there she married Mr. Sidwell, and returned to teach at the Friends School.

Mrs. Sidwell was past president of the Twentieth Century Club, and of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women, and was a member of the American Institute of Archeology, the American Civic Association, the Theater Guild and the Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

During the World War she worked among disabled soldiers at Walter Reed Hospital and was a member of the Washington Food Conservation Commission.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at St. Alban's Church, Wisconsin and Massachusetts avenues northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Idle Prefer Relief Payments to Jobs

Shortage in Farm Labor at Hagerstown Reported.

Hagerstown, Md., April 15 (Spl.).—Despite the fact that there are still hundreds on the local reilief rolls, the National Reemployment Bureau here has announced that it is having difficulty in meeting the demand for farm labor.

Farmers have found it difficult to persuade jobless men receiving aid from the relief agencies to take jobs, bureau officials said.

The bureau reported jobs obtained for 39 in private concerns and numerous others placed on Public Works projects getting under way here next week, while local factories have put on additional workers.

Educators to Meet Friday in Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—How the increased State support of education will work out in the public schools will be explained by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, before District "L" of the Virginia Education Association, at the annual meeting Friday at the Ocean High School in Princess Anne County.

Dr. Hall will speak at the all-day session, which will attract approximately 900 members.

Other speakers will include Miss Jessie Gray, a teacher in the public schools of Philadelphia, president of the National Education Association, and Dr. W. T. Hodges, dean of the Norfolk division of the College of William and Mary.

3 at Harrisonburg Held for Hurling Eggs at Pastor

Harrisonburg, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—Warrants have been issued by Justice Gilbert Pence, of Woodstock, for Stanley Stoneburner, Taylor Borden and Ralph Borden, on charges of interrupting religious services conducted by the Rev. Harvey Edge, of Washington, representing the denomination of the Church of God, by throwing eggs at the cleric and stones through the window of the church.

The three men deny the charge and will be given a preliminary hearing Saturday.

Senate Fight On Air Mail Bill Impends

Three Plans to Come Up Tomorrow; Lindbergh Probe Pressed.

Permanent air-mail legislation, designed to return the service to private carriers, will come before the Senate tomorrow, with every prospect the debate will be long and bitter.

Coming at a time when demands for an inquiry into the private quizzing of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh by the Department of Justice are being pressed, the discussion on the Senate floor is expected to bring into the open all the bitterness that has been fomenting since cancellation of the companies contracts two months ago.

Three separate measures—all of which would return the carrying of the air mail to private operators—will be urged by their respective proponents.

The McKeller-Black bill, sometimes referred to as the Administration's own measure, would bar those companies whose contracts were canceled until they have reorganized and purged themselves of officers or directors who attended the 1930 conference with former Postmaster General Brown. The terms of the bill, while providing a permanent basis for future air-mail service, are virtually the same as those under which the Postoffice proposes to let temporary contracts.

Bids Are Due Thursday.

While Postmaster General Farley stated 10 days ago he would not proceed with the temporary contracts for 21 air-mail routes if permanent legislation were enacted in time, this now is considered impossible. Bids on the temporary routes are due Thursday, and the Senate debate is certain to postpone adoption of permanent legislation past that time.

A second bill, for which Republicans are fighting, is the substitute measure proposed jointly by Senators Austin, Barbour and Davis. This bll would provide for immediate restoration of the cancelled contracts until the companies have been proved guilty of fraud and collusion, as charged.

Senator Austin, ranking Republican member of the Senate's Special Air Mail Investigating Committe, has written Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, demanding an inquiry into the secret questioning of Lindbergh by Justice Department officials last month. He asked that George A. Glendon, private secretary to Carl L. Ristine, special Assistant Attorney General in charge of air mail problems, be subpenaed to appear before the committee tomorrow. Ristine has admitted questioning Lindbergh for four hours, but asserted the famous flier's counsel, Col. Henry Breckenridge, approved the interview.

McCarron Presses Plan.

Black said he would put up to the full committee the question of going into the secret quiz. He charged Republicans were attempting to handicap the Department of Justice's activities through 'innuendo."

The third air-mail bill to be presented for Senate consideration within the next few days is that of Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, which would turn over the air-mail service to a "Federal Aviation Commission"—a body to be somewhat like the Interstate Commerce Commission—with payment to private carriers based upon actual services, as the railroads are paid.

The Senate today will debate and possibly pass the corporate bankruptcy bill, after which the air-mail legislation is next on the schedule, unless President Roosevelt intervenes and requests that the Senate program take a different course.

Daylight Burglars Take Clothing From Store

While Sunday crowds paraded Connecticut avenue, thieves broke into the Green Window Shop, in the 1700 block northwest, during daylight, according to police, and stole 16 dresses and other colthing articles valued at $370.

The loss was reported by Miss Maude Converse, proprietor, of the 2300 block of Connecticut avenue northwest. Police said a rear entrance was forced.

Col. L. M. Gulick Buried Today; Died in China

With full military honors, Col. Louis Mason Gulick, U. S. M. C., who died December 23, 1933, at his post as head of the American Legation guard at Peiping, China, will be buried today at 2 p. m. in Arlington National Cemetery.

Many high-ranking officers of the corps will be on hand to pay final tribute to Col. Gulick, nearly four months after his death.

Among the honorary pallbearers will be Brig. Gen. Hugh Matthews, the Marine Corps quartermaster; Brig. Gen. Douglas C. McDougal, assistant commandant; Col. David D. Porter, assistant adjutant and inspector of the corps; Col. R. P. Williams, Col. William P. Upshur, assistant adjutant and inspector; Col. Charles R. Sanderson, acting assistant quartermaster; Lieut. Col. Philip H. Torrey and Maj. David S. Barry.

The funeral procession will be formed at the Fort Myer entrance to the cemetery and services will be conducted by Capt. Sidney K. Evans, the Navy's chief of chaplains.

Col. Gulick was reared in the tradition of the corps. His father was the late Capt. John Louis Gulick, U. S. M. C.

Born May 27, 1879, in Italy, while Capt. Gulick was on duty there, he began his military career in 1898, entering the Marine Corps as a second lieutenant. After service in Guam and the Phillippines and several years in command of the Marine guard aboard the U. S. S. Illinois, in 1907 he was placed in charge of the American Legation guard at Peiping. As commanding officer of the Second Battalion of the Third Regiment, he took part in the capture of Vera Cruz, Mexico, in April, 1914.

Col. Gulick's World War service included participation in the Meuse-Argonne offensive while attached to the Second Marine Brigade. He was attached to the Sixth Regiment in the Verdun sector as an observer and spent several months in command of the first training regiment at Chatillon-sur-Cher, a post he held until the armistice.

Service at Marine Corps headquarters here, as officer in charge of the Marine detachment at Peiping and in command of Marine organizations in Haiti and Nicaragua followed his war duty. He was sent to Peiping in December, 1931.

Transients Who Come and Go Find City Always Hospitable

Wanderlust brings adventure-seekers from all sections of the country to seek shelter at Washington's Transient Bureau, Capt. Guy B. Earley, bureau division chief, declared yesterday.

Warm weather and approaching summer, however, have neither increased nor decreased transient rolls. There is a steady flow of applicants in and out of the bureau, Capt. Earley said. When one group "pushes on," he said, another arrives to take its place.

"We put them all to work and provide for them as long as they stay," the captain declared. "Spring weather may prompt a few to move along, but others soon take their place. Transient rolls now list 1,300 applicants. The number seldom varies."

"The majority of them," he declared, "just don't want the 'folks back home' to know real conditions. They send cheerful letters, but keep their families in the dark as to how they are faring."

He pointed out that many applicants secure positions through the Transient Bureau and remain in Washington. Many are sent to CCC camps and others "just wander away."

"But most of those who 'pass through' are suffering from plain cases of itchy feet," Capt. Earley added.

Post Dwelling Acclaim Grows

2,000 Visit Model Home on Benton Street During First Week.

Acclaimed daily by hundreds of delighted visitors as "the masterpiece of a master builder," the second Washington Post model home for 1934, at 3902 Benton street northwest, continues the greatest home display attraction of the city.

Built by B. H. Gruver, constructor of hundreds of the city's most excellent homes, this display dwelling is completely furnished by Hutchison, Inc., with draperies by John F. Ligon. It is notable for its electrically equipped kitchen and is referred to as "an electric kitchen health home."

The house will be open for inspection daily until 9 p. m. until further notice. To visit it, drive out Massachusetts avenue to Wisconsin avenue, turn south to Calvert street, west on Calvert street to Thirty-ninth street and south to the home. Another route is out Q street to Thirty-seventh street, north on Thirty-seventh street to Tunlaw road, then north one block to Benton street and west to the house.

More than 2,000 persons visited the residential offering during the first week it was open for public inspection.

The response to the presentation demonstrates that local home lovers have waited years for this new and fine type of house at a moderate price.

Women Democrats Hear Folk Songs

Sonia Troyano, Soprano, Sings Native Lyrics.

Presented by the Woman's National Democratic Club in their clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue, Sonia Troyano, soprano, gave a pleasant recital yesterday afternoon. Garbed in Spanish costume, the singer offered seven Iberian folk-songs, a group of indigenous lyrics from Cuba, Mexico and Puerto Rico, and a half dozen miscellaneous songs in English. She was capably accompanied by Malton Boyce.

Still in the formative period of artistry, Miss Troyano has in her favor an agreeably dulcet voice, youth, pulchritude and an ingratiating personality. The simplicity of the material on her program did not disguise the intelligence of her method. Discriminative in phrasing and accent, she has surety in attack and intonation. The natural quality of her voice will be enhanced when she cultivates its mezzo potentialities.—R. C. B. B.

Gas-Filled Car Bares Suicide Of U.S. Worker

Tube From Exhaust Pipe Kills L. E. Paxson, War Veteran.

Louis E. Paxson, 51, an employe of the Employes Compensation Commission and a resident of Washington for 35 years, was found in a gas-filled coupe, parked on a dump near Ross alley, Bladensburg, Md., yesterday. A length of metal tubing led from the exhaust pipe into the interior of the car.

Justice of the Peace Henry H. O'Neill, acting coroner, gave a verdict of death by suicide shortly after Dr. Oscar LaVine, of Mount Rainier, pronounced Paxson dead, following efforts of the Bladensburg Rescue Squad to revive him.

Paxson was found slumped over the wheel of his car by three colored men who called the rescue squad. Dr. LaVine said he had been dead six hours.

Relatives of the dead man said he had been ill for several days and had been out of employment for long periods during the last year. When seen Saturday by his sister-in-law, Mrs. C. W. Paxson, who called on him at his rooming house at 1719 Rhode Island avenue northwest, he seemed improved, appeared cheerful, and desired to return to work Monday, she said.

Paxson spent most of his years in the Capital in the Government service. He was employed in the Shipping Board for many years. He was a native of West Virginia and a Spanish-American War veteran.

Home Play Service, Aim Of District

News Bulletin to Aid in Recreation Program Is Planned.

Children Not LivingNear Parks Would Benefit by Project.

With the object of furnishing play facilities to the thousands of Washington children who do not live near playgrounds, the District Playground Department is planning a comprehensive backyard playground service it was learned yesterday.

The plans are in a preliminary stage, according to Miss Sibyl Baker, director of the playground department.

The District Congress of Parents and Teachers has agreed to share the sponsorship of the undertaking, and the Washington Chamber of Commerce directors have given their indorement to the program.

Miss Baker will make her first public talk on the proposed service before the Petworth Citizens Association tomorrow night.

The program, as visualized by Miss Baker, will embody a bulletin service, giving information on backyard playground layouts and equipment. The service is designed primarily for children up to five or six years of age, but it is intended to extend the service for older children.

The equipment recommended will be inexpensive and can be made at home. The bulletins will supply information on indoor games as well as outdoor.

Managers of apartment houses and institutions will be asked to cooperate in the program.

"Despite the fact that we have 90 playgrounds in Washington, there are far from enough for all children," Miss Baker said.

Mayor Will Head Reception Committee During Visit.

Norfolk, Va., April 15 (Spl.).—A reception committee of prominent Norfolk men, headed by Mayor W. R. L. Taylor, has been appointed by A. B. Schwarzkopf, president of both the Association of Commerce and Hampton Roads Maritime Exchange to entertain the National Rivers and Harbors Congress at its post-convention visit here May 2 and 3.

With delegates in attendance from virtually every section of the country, the congress will be held in Washington April 30 and May 1 after the convention delegates will take a three-day trip here by boat.

Five delegates will represent the Hampton Roads Maritime Exchange at the Washington meeting. These include Schwarzkopf, Harry M. Thompson, secretaries; Capt. J. D. Wood, A. E. Porter and L. G. Hogshire. Wood, a member of the city council, also will represent Norfolk. The Association of Commerce is to name delegates.

President and 25,000 to See Nats and Red Sox in Opener Today

Southpaw Duel Seen As Whitehill, Weiland Are Named to Start

Finger Hurt, Sewell Is Lone Regular Out; Bluege at Third.

By Shirley Povich

BIG league baseball will impose its presence on the affairs of the Nation this afternoon when the eyes of American fandom will be focused on Griffith Stadium, where President Roosevelt will unlimber a muscular right arm, groomed for the effort by his two-week training trip in Florida, and pitch out the first ball, the signal that will unleash the Nats and the Red Sox in the opening game of the season.

Washington fans will be getting a foretaste of the battling that will spread to all major league fronts tomorrow, with the grand opening in the Capital a special dispensation by the big league schedule makers in deference to the President's domicile here.

The original schedule called for the Washington club to open its season on foreign fields, which would delay its home inaugural until April 24, but with an appreciative eye toward the stamp of Presidential approval and attendance at the launching of the big league season, the club owners cleverly conceived the preview today.

25,000 to Attend.

Washington to the number of 25,000 is expected to trek to Griffith Stadium for the maiden effort of Manager Joe Cronin's club in the 1934 pennant race, barring unpleasant weather, which was a probability last night. The Weather Bureau predicted early-morning rains and rain again tomorrow, but obligingly saw clear weather for this afternoon.

For the noncombatants in the grandstands, Manager Cronin and Manager Bucky Harris of the Red Sox have provided all the elements of a brilliant southpaw pitching duel today. Cronin has announced he will intrust with the Nats' pitching hopes Earl Whitehill, the black-browed left-hander whose clever shutout victory saved the Nats from a complete rout in the late and lamented world series against the Giants.

On the firing line for the Boston club will be Lefty Bob Weiland, one of the better southpaws in the league, whom Bucky Harris has been grooming for more than two weeks for today's pitching effort.

Stone New Addition.

Manager Joe Cronin, the nobel of experiment of 1933, when, as the youngest manager in big league baseball, he piloted the Nats to a sensational pennant victory, brings his ball club back to Washington for the inaugural game today remodeled only in the outfield where the streamlined figure of Right Fielder Johnny Stone, late of Detroit, replaces Goose Goslin.

The unveiling of the Nats at 3 o'clock today will find them in the role of favorites to repeat their pennant triumph, with only the Yankees ranked as a serious contender, but in the Red Sox today they will be meeting the team that is the nobel experiment of 1934.

At the helm of the Boston club, Washington fans will be observing Bucky Harris, the former boy wonder of the Nats who managed the club to its first pennants in 1924 and 1925. Into the hands of Harris has been given the task of molding a contender out of the refurbished Red Sox backed by the millions of Tom Yawkey.

Joe Judge at First.

A far cry from the starless crew of 1933 is the current edition of the Red Sox, whose unlimited banking account transplanted from the Philadelphia Athletics such transcendant stars as Lefty Grove, the nonpareil; Rube Walberg and Max Bishop.

Grove will be on the sidelines today, nursing the first sore arm of his career that threatens to keep him out of action for the first week of the season, but Washington fans can thrill to the spectacle of Joe Judge at first base for the Boston club.

Sold down the river to Brooklyn a year ago, after 18 seasons as a Nat stalwart, Judge bounced back into the American League last fall with the Red Sox and inherited the first-base job when Eddie Morgan drew a fine and suspension last week.

Werber to Return.

In the Boston infield with Judge will be Bill Werber, who wrote his name indelibly in Washington high school athletics while at McKinley Tech and served an apprenticeship at shortstop with the Yankees before going to Boston, where he won a regular berth. In right field, Washington fans will be glimpsing another who wore a Nat uniform in Carl Reynolds, who landed in Boston via a trade with St. Louis during the winter.

Except for Stone in right field, Manager Cronin has seen fit to change the triumphant line-up of 1933 in no particular, although Luke Sewell will be missing from his customary catching position today, nursing an injured finger, while his capable understudy, Moe Berg, handles Whitehill's offerings.

At first base the reliably brilliant figure of Joe Kuhel with his .322 batting average graces the Nats' line-up beside Buddy Myer at second base. Cronin, himself, synonymous with the shortstop position for the Nats, will be leading his club from the field, but Washington fans will be viewing the strange spectacle of Third Baseman Ossie Bluege wearing spectacles.

Aided in Fight.

Successfully combatting the bid of young Cecil Travis to oust him from the third-base job, Bluege was aided in his fight by his new shatter-proof glasses, which he has discarded in the field, but is using at bat in an effort to bolster his .258 average.

The same big punch of the Nats will grace the outfield, with Heinie Manush and Fred Schulte completing with Stone the regular outpost trio.

Mason-Dixon Net Play Opens Today

Shields Ready to Defend in Singles, Doubles.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 15 (AP).—Fresh from his victory in the North and South championship, big Frank Shields prepared today to begin defense of his Mason and Dixon Singles tennis title and the doubles crown he holds with Lester Stoefen in the fourteenth annual tournament for the Plaza Bowl tomorrow.

Shields, who won the North and South title yesterday by defeating Wilmer Allison, 10—8, 14—12, 6—0, will be heavily favored in the field of 40, especially if Stoefen decides not to compete in singles. The big Californian, sensation of the indoor season, withdrew from singles at Pinehurst because he felt he needed a rest after his arduous campaign of the last two or three months.

Others in the men's singles field will include George M. Lott, Allison, John Van Ryn, Bryan Grant, jr., J. Gilbert Hall and Berkeley Bell as well as the Canadian Davis Cup players, Walter Martin, of Toronto, and Marcel Rainville, of Montreal.

Tigers Hit Hard To Defeat Reds, 7-4

CINCINNATI, April 15 (AP).—Long range hitting, smart fielding and passes helped the Detroit Tigers defeat Cincinnati, 7 to 4, today in the Reds' last preseason exhibition game. The Tigers won the first game of the series yesterday.

The American League Club piled up a good lead in the third inning by scoring four runs on three hits, two bases on balls and two errors. It added two more in the fifth when Charles Gehringer hit a home run after Rogell had tripled. A double and a triple accounted for the final run in the sixth.

A's Win Philly Series.

Philadelphia, April 15 (AP).—The Athletics won the annual city series championship with the Phillies today by nosing out the National Leaguers, 4 runs to 3. The victory was the Athletics' third in four games and the final game of the series was witnessed by about 10,000 fans.

The Phillies landed on Bob Kline for two runs in the first inning but the A's forged ahead by thumping Phil Collins for three runs in the fourth. In the eighth, the Phils put George Darrow, southpaw from Galveston, onto the mound but he was cracked for the A's fourth run, driven in by Pinky Higgins. In the same inning Bill Dietrich, succeeding Kline, walked Fullis and Jeffries and Hendrick scored Fullis with a single.

Rain Ends St. Louis Series.

St. Louis, April 15 (AP).—Rain today canceled the fifth and deciding game of the city series between the National League Cardinals and the American League Brown. The Cardinals and Browns divided the four games played.

The field was cloaked by a steady rain which started this morning and it was decided an hour before game time that it would be impossible to get it in condition to play today.

Soccer Title Contest Delayed by Downpour

St. Louis, April 15 (AP).—The National championship soccer game between the Rangers of Pawtucket, R. I., and the Stix, Baer & Fullers of St. Louis, defending titlists, scheduled for this afternoon, was postponed until tomorrow night because of rain.

A steady downpour turned the field at Walsh Stadium into a quagmire, and officials decided to postpone the contest. The field, home of the St. Louis University football team, is equipped with floodlights.

The Rangers, Eastern champions, and the Stix, Baer & Fullers divided the first two games of the championship series.

John Welch Holds Foe to Seven Hits Before 12,000 Fans.

BOSTON, April 15 (AP).—The Red Sox hammered their way to a 10-3 victory over the Braves in the fifth and last game of Boston's spring series before a 12,000 crowd at Braves' field today.

The Braves won the first three games of the series, two of them played in the South, but the Red Sox captured the last two here. John Welch pitched the distance for the Red Sox and held the Braves to seven hits, all singles. The Sox, possibly encouraged by the return of Lefty Grove, landed on Huck Betts for eight runs in the fifth inning. They were all scored after two were out.

18 Candidates Seeking Pompey Team Berths

Vale Summitt, Md., April 15 (Spl.).—Eighteen candidates are seeking berths on the Pompey baseball team of the Potomac Valley League. Pompey will open its season here with the East Side Colts of Cumberland, on May 5. The following day Pompey plays at Ellerslie.

Ohio State and Indiana To Vie in Penn Relays

Philadelphia, April 15 (AP).—Ohio State and Indiana—two Western Conference universities which have figured prominently in past University of Pennsylvania relay carnivals—have entered the fortieth renewal of the classic on Franklin Field April 27 and 28.

The Buckeyes will compete in five relay races and nine individual events. Indiana, which has not participated in recent years, has wired acceptance of an invitation to enter a number of relays and individual "specials."

Ours Is Better Team, Cry of All Managers

Seven Pilots in American, Five in National Feel They Have Real Pennant Contenders; Close Races in Both Leagues Seen.

NEW YORK, April 15 (AP).—On the eve of the major league baseball pennant races, starting in Washington tomorrow and spreading to all fronts on Tuesday, all 16 managers today donned rose-colored glasses to view the forthcoming campaign with optimism.

No fewer than seven of the eight pilots in the American League, including 71-year-old Connie Mack, of the Athletics, figure their clubs have a chance to finish in the first division. Five National League leaders consider they have organized real pennant contenders.

On this basis it may be necessary to call a traffic cop to control the closest and most exciting championship races witnessed in many years. Without exception, the major league managers believe that the wholesale shake-ups in player material since last season will react to diminish previous gaps in the standing of the clubs.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Connie Mack, Athletics—"I am very optimistic we are going somewhere this year. Our team is not so bad as some baseball experts would have you think. With Sunday baseball in Philadelphia for the first time, and if the team does what I expect of it, I feel we will have a good year."

Joe McCarthy, Yankees—"We are stronger than a year ago. The team has great offensive power. Defensively, we are improved on the infield. Rolfe and Heffner will mean much to us around second base. Our pitching is promising, with Ruffin and MacFayden geared for successful campaigning. We ought to be in the fight all the way."

Walter Johnson, Cleveland—"The Indians look to me like a first division club. We have what I believe to be the best pitching staff and the best catcher (Pytlak) in the American League. We have a very good outfield. Our main weakness lies in our infield. If I can patch that up, we may surprise everybody—including some of our most enthusiastic supporters."

Rogers Hornsby, St. Louis—"The American League race is a toss-up. Any good team that gets the breaks may win. The Browns have a better club, all the members of which will be trying hard to get out of the cellar."

Joe Cronin, Nationals—"We are going into the 1934 race with the confidence of pennant winners. Excepting Luke Sewell, our catcher, who still has a bad finger, and Al Crowder, who hasn't reached top pitching form yet, we are in splendid condition. Stone's spring training play has been outstanding. We hope to repeat, although we look for stiffer competition from the Yankees, Red Sox, Tigers and Indians."

Lew Fonseca, White Sox—"The batting power of the White Sox is going to make the club a threat. The failure of Durham's sore arm to respond to treatment is a problem, but we still have several promising young pitchers to aid the veterans, Lyons and Earnshaw. Bonura has proved his ability to hit. We do not expect to finish worse than third."

Bucky Harris, Red Sox—"Lefty Grove's condition seems to threaten our immediate chances, but I think the club is fortified with enough other pitching strength to more than hold its own until he is available."

Mickey Cochrane, Detroit—"I feel sure we have a real first division club. We will have more punch than the Tigers of 1933, in addition to better pitching. The club will hustle every step of the way. The Nats and the Yankees are the clubs we will have to beat, but the entire league is better balanced than at any time in the past 10 years."

53 Youths Get 'Diplomas' In Baseball School, Tryouts

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., April 15 (AP).—With "diplomas" tucked in their hip pockets, 53 ambitious youths, products of the second annual Ray Doan Baseball School here, will seek their fortunes on the diamond this summer and a chance to apply baseball strategy taught them by some of the game's foremost performers.

The "diplomas" awarded the 53 aspirants at the conclusion of the school were trials in organized baseball, a reward for the ability shown at the school during the past two months.

The St. Louis Cardinals selected eight youths for tryouts with their various farm teams. Included among the eight were Al Warneke, of Mount Ida, Ark., brother of Lon Warneke, the Chicago Cubs' ace hurler, also a pitcher; Pitchers Jack Williams, of Oshkosh, Wis., and Norman Small, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Infielders Frank Yaksick, Glairton, Pa., and Sam Harron, Middlesex, N. C., and Outfielders Forrest Allbright, Vern Rust and John Surgalski, all of Herrin, Ill.

Twelve youths were sent to Beatrice, Nebr., of the Nebraska State League, and 11 players to the Northern League. Paris, Tex., of the West Dixie League, will get seven, and two will go to El Dorado, Ark., of the East Dixie.

2 Swim Marks Lowered by Miss Holm

DETROIT, April 15 (AP).—Eleanor Holm Jarrett broke two of her own American backstroke records here today, but the New York Women's Swimming Association team was defeated by the Detroit Yacht Club, 23 to 22, in a dual meet at the Detroit Yacht Club.

Mrs. Jarrett set both new records in one race against time. She was clocked for the 200-meter and 220-yard back-stroke events. In the 220-yard she was timed in 2:51.9. This is five and seven-tenths of a second faster than the old American mark which Mrs. Jarret set in Buffalo in 1932.

Lowers Mark Six Seconds.

The second record was the 2:51 flat time for the 200 meters. This also betters the old mark of 2:57.2, which she set in 1932.

Although allof the record-breaking honors went to the New York swimmer, Doris Shimman, National 100-yard breat-stroke champion, took high-scoring honors for the day. Miss Shiman was first in the 50-yard free style and the 100-yard breast-stroke events, besides swimming anchor on the winning free-style relay team. It was Miss Shiman's points which won the meet for the Detroit team.

British to Launch Cup Yacht Today

Porstmouth, England, April 15 (AP). As T. O. M. Sopwith's blue, all-steel yacht Endeavour slips down into the water tomorrow morning she will carry the hopes of Britons by the thousands who have followed with interest the vain efforts of her predecessors, especially the late Sir Thomas Lipton's line of Shamrocks, to lift the America's cup.

If the present summery weather holds over for another day, local residents will be joined by hundreds from London in the course of the morning to cheer the craft as it is formally launched.

There will be much to interest the spectators, aside from the launching itself, including the arrival of the big wigs of the yachting world, most of whom will participate in an informal party after the launching. The party will be held aboard Sopwith's yacht, Vita, which later will escort the Endeavour on its transatlantic voyage in quest of the famous cup.

U. S. All-Army Poloists Defeat Mexico, 9 to 8

Mexico, D. F., April 15 (AP).—Jamming through the winning goal after four minutes of exciting overtime play, the American All-Army polo four defeated Mexico, 9 to 8, for their successive victory in the three-game series, today.

Mexico rallied to tie the score at 8-all a half-minute before the close of the eighth chugger, but the Americans came back in the extra period to win on a 70-yard drive by Maj. C. C. Smith.

Coast Crews Want Four-Mile Classic

California and Washington May Renew Rivalry.

Seattle, April 15 (AP).—The University of California and University of Washington crews are eager to renew their rivalry at 4 miles—preferably in the Poughkeepsie regatta this summer.

His California varsity defeated by Washington at 3 miles on Lake Washington here Friday, Coach Ky Ebright expressed the belief today that the extra mile might make it possible for his oarsmen to stave off defeat by the quarter length margin that marked the end of last week's race.

"We'll probably be meeting Washington again, the next time on the Hudson River at 4 miles," Ebright said.

25,000 See Yanks Beat Dodgers

Pitcher Van Atta Opens Attack With Lusty Three-Bagger.

NEW YORK, April 15 (AP).—A crowd of 25,000 saw the New York Yankees hammer Phil Page for three runs in the sixth inning and win an exhibition game from the Brooklyn Dodgers in the Yankee Stadium today, 4-2.

The Dodgers had gained a 2-to-1 lead in the first half of the sixth, but the Yanks' counterrally swept the victory out of Brooklyn's grasp. Russ Van Atta, who had relieved Danny MacFayden after the fifth, began it with a triple. A walk to Earl Combs, a single by Red Rolfe and Babe Ruth's double accounted for three runs and the ball game.

Ruth's Error Hurts.

An error by Ruth and a passed ball by Bill Dickey led to both Dodger runs.

The victory completed the Yankees' exhibition schedule and gave the American Leaguers 18 triumphs against 7 defeats and a tie.

Nats Butcher Butcher.

In the same manner that they took Richmond, the Nats butchered Al Butcher in the sixth inning for five runs and the ball game. Seven hits were mixed up in this spree, six of 'em consecutive, but the blow that was the piece de resistance was Ossie Bluege's home run over the left-field fence at a time when the Nats were two runs behind with two men on base.

Al Thomas and Bobby Burke, dividing the last six innings, held the Orioles to one hit off each, in shining contrast to Weaver's debacle in his own home town.

Golf Match Ends Up in A Draw

Par 71 for Houghton Is Best Round in Indian Spring Match.

AL HOUGHTON, Kenwood pro, and Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro, made a daring bid for victory in their special match against Lawson Little, Walker Cup nominee; Roger Peacock and George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, yesterday afternoon at the Indian Spring course, but, great as were their efforts, they could only hold their adversaries even for the 18-hole battle.

The fact that Houghton and Mackenzie held the two crack amateurs and professional rival to a draw after a ding-dong struggle was considered a tribute to the golfing prowess of the professional combination by a crowd of more than 600 spectators, who sarted out with the players and watched with bated breath until the very last shot was fired.

Houghton Has Par 71.

Houghton, cruising the course for the first time this year, stole the show with a display of rock-steady golf. After a bad tee shot and trapped second cost him a 5 on the first hole, the graying Kenwood instructor plowed away for a sub-par 34 on the first nine and a 37 on the second, to match par with a 71.

Little, also starting off with a 5, settled down, scoring a birdie on the second to give his team the lead, and coming back on the 460-yard seventh to rifle one of those spectatcular eagle three's that had the gallery gods gasping. The broad-shouldered Stanford athlete, and 1933 National amateur semi-finalist, drove some 250 yards into the rough, laid a number one iron second approximately 20 feet from the pin, and nailed his putt. Out in 34, Little lost his putting touch on the second nine, and finished 6-4-5, one over on each, for a 74.

Mackenzie Off Form.

Mackenzie, who had to rush away from a busy day at Congressional, appeared to be off color, and scored 38-37—75. Little Diffenbaugh, himself, was not up to standard, as he got 37-38—75. For that matter, neither was Roger Peacock, Maryland State amateur, who was reared on the course, playing in his best form. Peacock did 37 on the first nine, and went beserk on the second to wind up with 78—at least 8 shots above his usual game.

After Little put his side 1 up with a nifty birdie on the second, Houghton ups and dropped in an 8-footer on the third for a birdie to even the match. They halved the next 3 holes, and Houghton and Mackenzie became one down when that "Little" eagle was hatched on the seventh, and Diffenbaugh and Peacock got birdies to their opponents' par 5's. Houghton ran down another good putt for a birdie 3 on the eighth to even the count, and they rounded the bent all even.

Fours by Little and Diffenbaugh put them 1 up on the twelfth, but Mackenzie played three beautiful shots to the green for his birdie 4 to take the fifteenth, and Houghton put his team 1 up with a birdie 4 on the long 525-yard sixteenth. Peacock's par 3 on the well-trapped seventeenth balanced the scales, and they halved the eighteenth, although Diffenbaugh almost settled the issue when his chip for a bird from off the green rang the cup and danced out.

Barry Will Beat Kennedy Tomorrow If He Can Set Early Pace, Groves Feels

Both Fighters Declared in Fine Trim

Is Offering 2-1 on Self; Foe's Straight Punch Chief Obstacle.

LES KENNEDY punches on the theory that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points. Donald (Reds) Barry punches on the theory that it doesn't make any difference how they are swung, if they are swung fast enough and often enough. The diversity of their theories will be reconciled in the 10-round main event at Portner's tomorrow when Kennedy will attempt to snap home his straight punches quicker than Barry can land his speedy roundhouse swings.

Harry Groves, the Capital's ace conditioner, in whose tender care the person of Daring Donald has been placed prior to this bout, believes the Southeast Redhead can can loop them home fast enough to win, but is none too confident.

First Rounds Feared.

"I think the story will be told in the first two or three rounds," opines La Grove philosophically. "If Kennedy can get home first in the opening heats, he'll slow Barry down to his speed—then work on him at will. If Reds can stay on top of him right from the start, he should win without too much trouble."

Groves pronounces Barry in fine fettle for the impending encounter. The Steinway-legged Southeast Slapper worked 14 rounds Saturday, 11 yesterday and will confine his activities to a long walk around the Speedway today. The sight of the cherry blossoms, and the little red robbins and the spring worms coming up out of the ground is expected to produce in the temperamental Barry just the right mental attitude to go in the ring tomorrow and separate Kennedy's head from his broad shoulders. For the information of the gambling fraternity, it may be said that Daring Donald is offering 2 to 1 on himself, without having sauntered among the cherry blossoms, little red robbins and spring worms. Following his perambulations today, the odds may jump to 6 to 1.

In Top Condition.

Without benefit of any concessions to spring, Kennedy has quietly and efficiently whipped himself into top condition for the bout. His best chance of winning is generally believed to lie in his straighter punching and the fact that Barry is a notoriously weak puncher, against whom Kennedy can wade in without fear of harm.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

One of the strangest habits of the strange element called radium is its constant disintegration. It is constantly going to pieces, emitting rays, and becoming in part another substance. The first product of radium disintegration is radon, a gas. Eventually the disintegration process ends up with common lead.

Radium goes to pieces at a very definite rate, however, and nothing man has been able to do has any effect on this rate. If you had one ounce of radium today, a year from today you would have but 2279/2280 of an ounce. It makes no difference what heat or cold, pressure, acids, caustic or other conditions the radium is subjected to, the rate of disintegration is always constant and always amounts to one part in 2,280 per year.

Strange as it seems, the other 2,279 parts remain absolutely unchanged at the end of the year—but the one part is utterly different, it is no longer radium.

Celebrated as the most perfect example of wood sculpture ever known, the wooden statue carved by Hananuma Masakichi, about 40 years ago, is so life-like that it is sometimes mistaken for a living person. Masakichi used himself as a model, working with an elaborate arrangement of mirrors. He used more than 2,000 separate pieces of wood which were ingeniously joined together. The eyebrows and hair were his own, holes being drilled for each individual hair, and the statue is perfectly colored and accurate down to the smallest vein and muscle.

Dear Al:

Mike and I pitched the Bennings, Inc., camp on the banks of the Susquehanna tonight and spent several hours plotting a hat full of winners for the annual Harford County meeting. Our first move was to establish an alibi, in case things fail to break our way, by greeing that horse picking hereabouts is going to be a mighty tough proposition. Horses that winter in the North are now reaching their peak and the edge that the Florida horses had at Bowie will be missing. The difference in the surface of the Bowie and Graw tracks makes the form that we have gathered in the two weeks of Maryland racing rather unreliable. However, there must be winners and we expect to get ou rshare. Thus we recommend these. BILL.

First race—Trillium ran good races at Bowie and deserves top selection in this group. Tipton probably will do the saddle work. Fred Almy gets in light and present form makes him a serious contender. God o' War has some promising races. Breaks from the inside with Robertson up and is dangerous. Outside chance for Immune, a fast worker.

Second race—The Heathen was a trifle short in his outing at the Prince Georges track. The veteran should improve enough off that effort to take care of this brand of sprinters. Vishnu for the place. My Boss is improved and is likely to make a money appearance.

Third race—Arbitrary should have won those two starts in Florida. Has shown a lot of speed and is the most likely winner of this group. Moisson closed a gap last out, and seems due for the place award. Credulous, a first-time starter, for the show.

Fourth race—White Bird barely missed taking a purse last week. Showed an excellent effort although beaten at the very end. That race may have beer the toic eeded. Be Shy has worked well since coming Nortn and will be in the thick of the fight. Round Table hit his stride in that last outing and could make it hot for his rivals with a little improvement.

Fifth race—I'm going right back to Miney Myerson. This one won the Inaugural at Bowie for me. Meets several fresh horses here, but is still the speed of the party I believe. Springsteel gets high weight as usual, but is dangerous. Trials have been good. Curacao for the show.

Seventh race—Rock Point runs honest races and is in excellent condition now. Brass Monkey, with a win under his belt, is dangerous. Little Stokes is more sternly opposed tomorrow but must be respected.

Teams Ready, Pilots See Good '34

All Clubs Are Stronger, if Managers Are to Be Believed.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Bill Terry, Giants—"I am not claiming the pennant, but I believe we have a better ball club than we had last year and that we may win, with the benefit of a few breaks. At any rate, I do not concede any other club has a better chance than ours. We haven't looked so good against Cleveland and we miss Mancuso, but the hitting will improve and we will get some great pitching."

Frank Frisch, Cardinals—"I won't predict a pennant for the Cardinals but that's our objective. We have a great club. I'm satisfied with all departments and we won't have any worries if the pitchers deliver."

Jimmy Wilson, Phillies—"We may not make as many runs as last year, but we will be faster, our defense will be better and our opponents will not make as many runs. The team may not look as 'hot' on paper as the outfit that included Whitney, Klein, Davis and Lee, but it's twice as 'hot' on the ball field and will win games."

George Gibson, Pirates—"If our pitching staff comes as expected, the Pirates will be in the thickest from the start. The staff appears strengthened by the addition of Red Lucas and the development of Lefty Birkofer. Larry French is better than ever. We are strong in every position."

Charley Grimm, Cubs—"We intend to win the National League pennant. Our attack has been bolstered by Chuck Klein and the presence from the start of Kiki Cuyler, who was out the first half of last season with a broken leg. Our reserve strength is better and I have no worries as to pitching."

Bill McKechnie, Braves—"We are fortunate to get a man like Marty McManus for the infield, after losing Rabbit Maranville, and I see no reason why the Braves should not be in the pennant race from start to finish. All of these clubs claiming the flag will find they have us to reckon with."

Carey Stengel, Brooklyn—"I'm not making any predictions, but I will say we should beat out at least two other clubs and provide Brooklyn fans with some interesting baseball as we go along. We have some talented young players."

Bob O'Farrell, Cincinnati—"We have a good ball club and, while we don't expect to win the pennant, our hitters are going to worry a lot of opposing pitchers. I will be satisfied if we can jump up a couple of notches in the standing."

Kid Chocolate In Comeback Tonight

NEW YORK, April 15 (AP).—California gains a virtual monopoly on the cauliflower industry this week.

Three major shows, featuring Kid Chocolate, King Levinsky and Bob Godwin, will be held on the West Coast this week, while boxing arenas in other sections either are idle or offer less important leather-pushers.

Chocolate, Cuba's great featherweight of a few years back, begins what he hopes will be a successful comeback campaign at San Francisco tomorrow night. Knocked out by Frankie Klick in his last start, stripped of his claim to the featherweight crown by the New York State Athletic Commission, Chocolate will start on the road back to fame in a ten-round match with Frankie Wallace, Cleveland lightweight.

Levinsky Meets Ramage.

Levinsky, burly Chicago heavyweight, meets Lee Ramage, clever San Diego boxer, at Los Angeles Tuesday night, while Godwin, who held Mickey Walker to a draw last week, tackles Frank Rowsey, of Los Angeles, at Hollywood Friday.

Monday—At Oklahoma City, Maxey Rosenbloom, New York, vs. Clyde Chastian, Dallas, light-heavyweights, 10 (nontitle); at San Francisco, Kid Chocolate, Cuba, vs. Frankie Wallace, Cleveland, lightweights, 10; at Albany, N. Y., Tony Rock, Scranton, Pa., vs. Pete Gulotta, Brooklyn, welterweights, 8; at Boston, Jack McCarty, Boston, vs. Dick Madden, Boston, heavyweights, 10; at Holyoke, Mass., Johnny Jadick, Philadelphia, vs. Charley Bedami, New York, lightweights, 10; at Syracuse, N. Y., Steve Halaiko, Auburn, N. Y., vs. Mickey Serrian, Scranton, Pa., and Stanislaus Loayza, Chile, vs. Eugene Emmanuel, Syracuse, all junior welterweights, each 8; at New York (St. Nicholas Arena), Tony Falco, Philadelphia, vs. Phil Rafferty, New York, welterweights, 10.

Tuesday—At Los Angeles, Lee Ramage, San Diego, vs. King Levinsky, Chicago, heavyweights, 10; at Portland, Oreg., Bert Paxton, Detroit, vs. Sig Ecklund, Portland, light-heavyweights, 10; at Jacksonville, Fla., Eddie Buri, Alexandria, Va., and Ray Terry, Jacksonville, featherweights, 12, and Lope Tenorio, New York, vs. Billy Hood, Orlando, Fla., welterweights, 10; at Cleveland, Eddie Simms, Cleveland, vs. Charley Massera, Pittsburgh, heavyweights; Jimmy Vaughan, Cleveland, vs. Lew Feldman, New York, featherweights, and Mickey Dugan, Cleveland, vs. George Nichols, Buffalo, light-heavyweights, each 10; at West Palm Beach, Fla., Relampo Saguero, Cuba, vs. Billy Shell, Columbus, Ga., middleweights, 10.

Wednesday—At Kansas City, Joey Alcanter, Kansas City, vs. Tommy Corbett, Omaha, junior lightweights, 8; at St. Louis, Natie Brown, Washington, D. C., vs. Art Stillman, St. Louis, heavyweights, 10; at Cincinnati, Roughhouse Glover, Jacksonville, Fla., vs. Sammy Slaughter, Terre Haute, Ind., middleweights, 10.

Thursday—At St. Paul, Babe Daniels, Minneapolis, vs. Frankie Neenan, Chicago, lightweights, and My Sullivan, St. Paul, vs. Johnny Simpson, Minneapolis, middleweights, each 8; at Milwaukee, Kid Leonard, Moline, Ill., vs. Tait Littman, Cudahy, Wis., middleweights, 10.

Friday—At Hollywood, Bob Godwin, Florida, vs. Frank Rowsey, Los Angeles, light-heavyweights, 10; at Philadelphia, Ken Overlin, Norfolk, Va., vs. Tommy Rios, Wilmington, Del., middleweights, 10.

Wizzard Locksmiths Win.

The Wizzard Lock nine defeated the Ramblers unlimited team yesterday, 7 to 0, in a practice game. Striking out nine men and allowing only three hits, Rocco Nocera was the winning pitcher of the game.

Galvin Breaks Foot, Hurting Pennant Hopes of Richmond

RICHMOND, Va., April 15 (AP). Richmond's hopes for pennant contender in the Piedmont League race this year were rudely shaken yesterday when Jim Galvin, hard-hitting and young, but tried catcher, broke a bone in his left foot in stealing second base in an exhibition game against the Rochester Internationals.

Galvin was one of the mainstays of the club. His hitting was a great help to the club last year, and the added catching knowledge gained under the wing of Manager Jack Onslow last year was expected to prove of great help this season. Just who Manager Ed Hendee will get to replace Galvin, who will be out of the game for at least three weeks, was problematical.

Opens On April 23.

The local club has several major league connections, and it is thought that a capable reserve will be obtained before the start of the season here against Norfolk on April 23. The Colts have needed a second string catcher, but have delayed obtaining him until the majors were settled. Now Hendee and Owner Eddie Mooers are expected to get busy and obtain a replacement at once.

Other than Galvin, the Colts will present a combination of age and youth. Hendee, himself a tried veteran, will be back at first base. Jack Sanford, the young second baseman purchased from Wilmington at the close of last season, will return to fill that berth for Richmond. But at shortstop and third-base positions, Manager Hendee finds himself in a quandary. None of the youngsters trying for the two berths has shown much promise, although Willie Powell, former captain of the University of North Carolina nine, has shown flashes in the exhibitions to date. Eddie Lucke and Ted Kershner, two rangy infielders who tried for berths last year, have been spotty in their play, although Lucke appears the most likely candidate of the pair.

Strong Outfield.

The outfield is strong. Frank Rodgers, fleet centerfielder, and Charlie "Croaker" Wade, rangy and home-run-hitting rightfielder, are the nucleus of this fly-snagging trio. Bobby Carr, picked up from the local fast semipro Intercity League, and "Hap" Spencer, another rookie, are battling for the vacant position.

It is in pitching that the Colts are strongest. The staff is headed by Herman Holhauser, right-hander, who won 22 games last year. Joining Holhauser will be Dewitt Perry, late of Wilmington; Shine Rumple, purchased from Winston Salem at the close of the 1933 season, and Vernon "Buck" Green.

All told, the Colts will have a well-balanced team if a capable replacement is picked up for Galvin and the left side of the infield develops. Hitting power as well as a lack of defensive strength are missing at the two positions, and the Colts are expected to get the men who will fill the positions capably.

Generals Lead On Virginia Diamonds

RICHMOND, Va., April 15 (AP).—Washington and Lee's Generals, whose stranglehold on the championship situation in the Old Dominion is bordering upon a monopoly in restraint of trade, were setting the pace today in the State's baseball title race.

Randolph-Macon's Yellow Jackets shared with them the distinction of no defeats to Old Dominion teams, each in two starts, but the Generals had tougher opposition on their hands.

Dick Smith's lads, standing pat on their perfect score in the State, lent their efforts to a successful attempt to improve their Southern Conference score during the week with Joe Pette pitching the Generals to a 6-to-0 triumph over N. C. State.

Meanwhile the Jackets pounced on Bridgewater's Eagles for a pair of victories to run up a perfect score in State and Chesapeake Conference competition.

Rogers Gets Break.

Virginia's phenomenal Orlin Rogers, who lost heart-breaking decisions to Maryland and North Carolina earlier in the season, saw the other fellow suffer the same fate yesterday when the Cavaliers outpointed Navy, 2 to 0. Rogers, who allowed four hits, among them a double and a triple, received credit for the victory. He fanned 13. Sexton limited the Virginians to only one hit, but costly errors by Van Arsdall, Navy catcher, let in both runs.

The Chesapeake Conference title race opened up with a bang with four games testing the strength of the contenders. Hampden-Sydney, after shutting out the Bridgewater Eagles, 10 to 0, lost, 5 to 4, the next day. Randolph-Macon went into the lead by trimming the Eagles, 11 to 7, and 8 to 3, on consecutive days.

Maryland's Southern Conference leaders found the going rough on their Old Dominion invasion and lost a 10-to-2 decision to the University of Richmond Spiders, and took a 5-to-3 whipping from William and Mary.

The schedule:

Tomorrow—Randolph-Macon vs. Medical College, at Richmond; William and Mary vs. Roanoke, at Williamsburg.

PROPOSALS

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, April 10, 1934. Sealed bids in duplicate will be received until 2 o'clock p. m. TUESDAY, May 1, 1934, and then publicly opened in Room 6108 Interior Department Building, for furnishing all labor and material necessary for the following construction work: 1. For construction of the heat, light and power plant at Howard University, Washington, D. C., including excavating, reinforced concrete construction, foundations for engines, boilers, machinery, &c., structural steel work, brick or masonry, miscellaneous iron work, roofing, flashing, carpentry, steel sash, plumbing, heating, finish grading, concrete walks, landscaping, &c. 2. Steam piping, air ducts, fans, air ducts, breeching, oil-burning equipment and combustion control. 3. Steam generators, fans, air ducts, breeching, underfeed stokers, ash handling equipment, coal handling equipment, and combustion control. 4. Turbo-generators, motor generators and exciters. 5. Removal and erection of the present 250 K. W. Allen engine in the Freedmen's Hospital power plant to the new power plant. 6. Also piping in the power plant and piping from the power plant to the Medical School and to Freedmen's Hospital, also water treatment, boiler feed pumps, feed water heaters and surge tanks, instruments and gauge boards. 7. Chimney construction. 8. Switchboard and electrical installations within the power plant, transformer vaults and combustion chamber. All existing buildings at Howard University. The Government reserves the right to award contracts on the basis of the above proposals in any one of the following three methods: 1. Seven separate contracts. 2. Fewer than seven contracts by combining awards. 3. One contract covering all seven proposals if the interest of the Government so dictates. Proposals will be considered only from individuals, firms or corporations possessing satisfactory financial and technical ability, equipment, organization, &c., to insure speedy completion of the contract, and in making awards the records of bidders as expeditious and satisfactory performance on contracts of similar character will be carefully considered. At the discretion of the Secretary, drawings and specifications may be obtained upon application to the department. Furnishing of plans will be limited to persons or firms who intend bidding direct to the Government upon one of the eight proposals mentioned. A certified check for $100, payable to the Treasurer of the United States, must accompany each proposal as security for the safe return of the plans. Liquidated damages for delay will be at the rate of $100 per calendar day, but in the event an award is made covering all items in the contract, the damages for delay will be $300 per day. Time of performance will be an essence of the contract and will be considered in four equal installments, payable in one, two, three and four years, with interest at six per centum per annum, payable semiannually, from day of sale, secured by first deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 will be required at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, etc., at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within 30 days from day of sale, otherwise the trustees reserve the right to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C. OSCAR L. CHAPMAN, Assistant Secretary.

Manslaughter

A schoolboy patrolman was leading a group of children across an intersection. He signaled an approaching car to stop, but the driver had neglected his brakes and another victim was added to the toll of carelessness. This driver had failed to realize that stopping instantly was more important than starting easily. He was convicted of manslaughter.

Walt Mason, Himself

In Woman's Clothing.

I read a book the other day that was extremely foul; it turned my sorrel whiskers gray, and I sent up a howl. A woman's stately name appeared upon the title page, as author of that volume weird, that wonder of the age. And I remarked, "Alack, alas, this book is vile and rough, and things have reached a pretty pass when women write such stuff. When I was young the women stood for decent things and clean; they wouldn't get down, if they could, to actions base and mean. If they sat down in inglenooks, at literary task, they always turned out wholesome books, with morals by the cask. Then women hated all things rude, were shocked by vicious tomes, no author, in a vulgar mood, could then invade their homes. But now it seems that women rush to print with maudlin glee, and turn out books that bring a blush to hard-boiled guys like me." "You needn't worry," answered Dan, who'd heard me thus declaim: "that book was written by a man who swiped a woman's name. The author has a long red beard, he smokes a briar pipe, and he is doubtless double geared to write that kind of tripe." It seems unfair for any male, in his pursuit of fame, to write a bad and filthy tale, and sign a woman's name.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Open For Business By Harry J. Tuthill

WELL OLD MAN, HERE WE ARE LAUNCHED IN THE MOST EXCITING BUSINESS IN THE WORLD. THE DETECTIVE GAME. MYSTERY! THRILLS! THE LOVE OF THE CHASE! ALL THAT!
I'D LIKE TO THINK OF A NAME THAT WOULD GO WITH THE SLOGAN...WHERE OTHERS LEAD WE FOLLOW.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 4-16
ALL MY LIFE I'VE WANTED THIS. A CHANCE TO WORK A CASE UP TO THE ANGLE WHERE I CAN POINT TO A PERSON NO ONE SUSPECTS AND SAY, YOU ARE THE GUILTY MAN!
WE COULD CALL IT THE SEARCHLIGHT DETECTIVE BUREAU. WHERE OTHERS LEAD WE FOLLOW.
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
O.K. GEORGE! FINE! WE'LL SHOW NO FAVORS TO HIGH NOR LOW. OUR JOB IS TO PROTECT THE INNOCENT AND PUNISH THE GUILTY.
I'D LIKE THE NAME VENDETTA BETTER IF IT RHYMED WITH THE SLOGAN, WHERE OTHERS LEAD WE FOLLOW.

GEE! YOUNG BOPPO AINT COME TO YET!
JUST A LUCKY PUNCH—THAT'S ALL!
YEAH? BUT SUPPOSE HE GETS LUCKY AGIN—AND POPS YOU ONE LIKE THAT?
HE MIGHT YOU—BUT NOT ME!
WHY NOT YOU?
HE AIN'T GONNA TAKE A SWING LIKE THAT AT ME—
AND RUN A CHANCE O' GETTIN' ME SORE AT HIM!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY By Clifford McBride

WELL, AS LONG AS I'VE READ EVERYTHING I CAN FIND ON OUTBOARD MOTORS, GUESS I'LL TAKE A SPIN AN' SHOW FOLKS AROUND HERE HOW GOOD I AM.

WHEN DIXIE'S TRIP OUT OF TOWN IS CALLED OFF AT THE LAST MINUTE, SHE CALLS UP EDGERTON JEPPWORTH WHO HAD ASKED HER TO STEP OUT WITH HIM, BUT FINDS HE HAS MADE ANOTHER DATE IN THE MEANTIME— — BEING LONESOME, DIXIE THEN CALLS HER NEW GIRL FRIEND FLOSSIE
SORRY, THE TELEPHONE IS OUT OF ORDER
OH—GEE
WELL—I'VE NOTHING ELSE T' DO AN' IT'S SUCH A GRAND EVENIN' I MIGHT AS WELL WALK OVER TO FLOSSIE'S HOUSE—
BUT DIXIE DOESN'T KNOW
BY TH' WAY— JUST BEFORE I CAME HERE I HEARD FROM DIXIE— SHE ISN'T GOING OUT OF TOWN AFTER ALL—HER AUNT AND UNCLE HAVE THE MUMPS
OH—!! AN' DID YOU TELL HER YOU WERE COMIN' TO SEE ME?
NO—I DIDN'T GET A CHANCE — SHE SEEMED A LITTLE PUT OUT ABOUT MY HAVING MADE ANOTHER ENGAGEMENT SO QUICKLY, AND SHE CUT THE CONVERSATION SHORT— BUT I'LL EXPLAIN TO HER LATER
OH-SURE!— AN' YOU SAY HER RELATIVES WENT AN' GOT TH' MUMPS —WELL I'D SAY THEY CERT'NLY HAVE GOT A LOT OF CHEEK

THE GUMPS Front Page News

NOT A WORD ABOUT LITTLE NELL— BUT WHAT'S THIS IN HEADLINES? "BIM GUMP FORTUNE TO BE TIED UP BY INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS— PENDING SETTLEMENT OF BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT—"
4-16
SO THAT'S THEIR GAME, IS IT? THEY HAVEN'T HUMILIATED AND TORTURED ME ENOUGH— THEY'RE GOING TO TIE UP MY MONEY— AIR MY LOVE AFFAIRS IN COURT— MAKE ME RIDICULOUS IN THE EYES OF THE WORLD—
AND CAN YOU BEAT THIS— "EX-FIANCÉ CALLS BIM GUMP A GAY DECEIVER— SAYS HE LOVED AND RAN AWAY—" THAT— FROM THE GIRL ONCE ADORED—WELL— THEY WON'T GET AWAY WITH IT— I'LL FIGHT THEM EVERY STEP OF THE WAY— I'LL CALL THE BEST LAWYER IN THE STATE— I'LL SEE THAT THEY NEVER GET A CENT OF MY MONEY—

DICK TRACY Refuting Evidence

I REPEAT GENTLEMEN— IF TESS TRUEHEART HAD GRIPPED THE GUN AS SHOWN BY THE FINGERPRINTS ON THIS WEAPON FOUND IN JEAN PENFIELD'S APARTMENT, HER FINGER COULD NOT HAVE PROPERLY REACHED THE TRIGGER.
WELL, WHAT DOES THAT PROVE?
THAT HER FINGERPRINTS WERE LIFTED AND PLACED ON THE GUN STOCK, BUT IN SUCH A CLUMSEY MANNER THAT ANY SMALL TOWN COP COULD SEE THEY WERE PHONEY.
I SEE! THEN YOU THINK SOMEBODY ELSE DID THE KILLING AND THAT THE WHOLE THING WAS FRAMED SO AS TO THROW THE GUILT ON TESS.
TRACY, YOU'RE IN LOVE.
PERHAPS! BUT I'M ALSO TRYING TO USE WHAT LITTLE JUDGEMENT AND REASONING THE CREATOR WAS GOOD ENOUGH TO GIVE ME. THAT'S MORE THAN CERTAIN OTHER PEOPLE DO.
